CHAIRMAN HEINLE says Tom Dunkle is a traitor because he gave that $900 sheriff deal away.

WHO first started the story that Isbler paid $900 for his nomination? Heinle says Tom Dunkle did.

PREACHERS do not make good politicians, as a rule, although we can't see why they shouldn't as they are thus thrown side by side with the devil.

IF the voters of Centre county wan't to put good men in office then let them vote for George W. Fisher for register, as well as the entire republican ticket.

NEW JERSEY is no longer a national Gretna Green. The new marriage license law, modeled after Pennsylvania's prize statute, has gone into effect in Jersey, and Camden's hymeneal harvest is over.

JOHN A. RUPP is a first class miller why not allow him to work at his trade for the next three years? It will be a pleasant diversion from the toil and worry of the Register's office. What say you, voters?

To the democrats of Centre county: Isn't it provokingly mean to have everything so nicely fixed for one man for Congress and then have the little scheme "knocked into a cocked hat" by those who think different?

LET no Republican lose his vote because he has not paid his tax. Remember next Saturday, October 4th, is the last day on which it can be paid. Attend to it at once!

IF James Kerr, M. C., turned pale when he read the telegram announcing his defeat for renomination for Congress in this district, what color will be turn when Delamater's 80,000 majority comes rolling in on him on the fourth of November?

THE democratic organs are continually harping on recorder Harter's profession as a doctor as a reason he does not need to be re-elected, Do they forget that Mr. Morrison is a first class school teacher and that the county can't afford to lose him just now?

FIVE weeks from Tuesday of this week the republicans in Centre county will help elect a republican governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of internal affairs, congressman and elect a full republican county ticket. Let every man vote straight and the above will be the result.

WE do not ask the votes of a single man for George Fisher because he is a cripple but because we believe the interests of the people will be best served by electing a republican to the office of register, and because we know of Mr. Fisher's ability to perform the duties of that office.

TRY as they may the domocratic organs cannot successfully explain to the few members of their party who have not yet got their eyes opened, their assertions that the county will soon be bankrupt. Their explanations don't agree with the published county statement, which was audited and its correctness attested to by the oaths of a democratic board of auditors. The whole thing is simply nothing more or less than a political bugaboo and its purpose is so plainly evident that to their own party it is the most convincing argument that could be used in favor of republican administration. Vote for Strohm and Kunes for county commissioners.

A WALLACE BLAST.

The friends of Hon. William A. Wallace have abandoned the notion of continuing in a passive state toward the Scott-Pattison and Mugwump combination that enjoyed pushing the knife into Wallace and turning it around and the first evidence of their desire to grow jubilant over the combination made itself apparent in the northwestern part of Pennsylvania yesterday.

It was at Ridgway, in Elk county. The Congressional conferrees of the twenty-eighth district were assembled there for the purpose of naming a candidate for Congress.

They made the nomination, placed G F Kribbs, of Clarion, on the ticket and returned home satisfied. The majority of the conferrees were not particular friends of Kribb's nor did they have any special admiration for his ability over the other candidates.

It was nothing more or less than a conference of some of the most trusted friends of Hon. William A. Wallace and they took the first opportunity of showing how much in sympathy they were with the Pattison campaign by ignoring the old time custom of giving a Congressman two terms and defeated Mr. Kerr of Clearfield county, who is the Chairman of the Pattison State committee.

There can be no doubting that this was a blow by the friends of Wallace at the Pattison monstrosity. The conference was made up of the friends of Wallace and had Wallace desired the renomination of Kerr it would have been made without a question. But Kerr saw fit to listen to the sweetness of the Mugwumps who besought him to accept the chairmanship of the Pattison forces; he turned a deaf ear to the telegrams and letters from the friends of Wallace, advising him to keep out of the mess, and saw fit, posing as a friend to Wallace, to create the impression that the Clearfield statesman had no more manhood than to get down in the dust before the people who had sold him out. It was the mistake of Kerr's life, and he doubtless feels it to day.

In this shelving of Kerr the Wallace people of Pennsylvania define themselves beyond the question of a doubt. The proof of this is no better shown than by the fact that the nomination of Kribbs and the defeat of Kerr is at the door of J. K. P. Hall, the Democratic leader of Elk, one of the members of the Congressional conference and one of the most enthusiastic Wallace Democrats in Pennsylvania.

The Centre county conferrees were ready to go for Kerr at any time, and knowing this Hall, had Wallace so desired, could have made Kerr a sure winner; Kerr, a well known friend of Wallace, placed his chief in false position by the acceptance of the Democratic State Chairmanship and he necessarily became the victim of his own foolishness. His defeat for the Congressional nomination is a crushing blow to an ambitious young man who left the friends of life to secure a warm place in the affections of those who knifed his greatest friend.

His defeat is in addition a notice from the Wallace Democrats of Pennsylvan that is above and beyond any construction other than that it came to him as a refutation of any and all the yarns that seek to convey the impression that Wallace has any interest in Pattison's campaign or that his friends will assist any in the election of the tool of those who knife him.—Williamsport Republican.

Now let the friends of General Hastings step up to the work and nominate and elect him. It can easily be done, and by an overwhelming majority, too.

NOT AN IMPOSSIBILITY.

The Democrats in that group of counties comprising the Twenty-eighth Congressional District never have been able to live in peace with themselves and they promise a volcanic disturbance this year rather superior to any previous exhibition of that sort. The defeat of Congressman Kerr for renomination by that Elk County influence which has sometimes suffered at the hands of the other counties is an event of no small significance. The Hon. James Knox Polk Hall may now congratulate himself that he is pretty nearly even with Clearfield County for his defeat in 1886, as well as scoring something against Centre county. In a district but little different from this, and including three strong Democratic counties in the present district, the Republicans elected a Congressman four years ago. With a broadminded and popular Republican candidate, that would not be a hopeless task to undertake this year.—Philadelphia Press.

Our wise Philadelphia contemporary knows whereof it speaks when it says the election of a popular and broadminded Republican candidate would not be a hopeless task this year. Indeed, all things considered, it seems only a conservative saying to predict that with the right man in the field his election would be assured from the beginning. Out of the five counties in this district three are democratic. Centre and Clearfield give the largest democratic majorities. With the right man in the field these counties could be made to give a Republican majority. Verily the prize is now within our grasp—will the Republicans of the 28th district refuse to take it?

THE DISGRUNTLED REPUBLICANS.

The disgruntled, or independent, as they style themselves, Republicans have thus far not succeeded in running a very effective campaign. In the first place Chris Magee, through his Pittsburg Times, attempted to score a point by publishing what Senator Quay was to have said about making and owning governors. When the time come and Quay denied it and Magee attempted to prove it he only succeeded in making a fool of himself by showing that the exact saying was manufactured for the occasion right within his own office.

Next came Senator Emery with his charges and handful of followers The disgruntled ones tried hard to make a point out of this but finally the time come when Emery was obliged to prove his charges to sustain his following. By this time all the politicians in the State know how he succeeded Before their very eyes the so-called independents saw another strong pillar crumble to dust and now all that remains is Wharton Barker and his following of disgruntled office seekers and sordid Democrats in Philadelphia. What a foundation on which to build a hope of defeating Senator Delamater! All their movements stranded the leaders now find themselves as isolated as if alone on an island in the middle of the Pacific with no sail in sight and absolutely no chance of getting in out of the wet before the drenching flood of votes that will fall for Delamater on the 4th of next November; and, unless they want to be drowned entirely, they had better come into the fold lest his majority entirely overwhelm them.

LET no Republican lose his vote because he has not paid his tax. Remember next Saturday, October 4th, is the last day on which it can be paid. Attend to it at once!

The breath of a chronic catarrh patient is often so offensive that he becomes an object of disgust. After a time ulceration sets in, the spongy bones are attacked and frequently entirely destroyed. A constant source of discomfort is the dripping of the purulent secretions into the throat, sometimes producing inveterate bronchitis, which in its turn has been the exciting cause of pulmonary disease. The brilliant result which have attended its use for years past properly designate Ely's Cream Balm as by far the best and only cure. sept 26-2w

AFTER the election Gaylor Morrison can blame his own party papers for his defeat. Their own argument "vote for Rupp because he has proved a good official and it is customary to give such an official a second term," is the strongest argument that could possibly be used in favor of Harter for recorder.

Let no Republican lose his vote because he has not paid his tax. Remember next Saturday, October 4th, is the last day on which it can be paid. Attend to it at once!

FOR the last thirty years there has no been an administration in the Commissioner's office managed so successfully as has been the one during the past three years. Every voter in Centre county knows this and also knows the reason why. And, seeing the good results of a republican administration, the voters and tax payers have made up their minds to have more of the same kind. To do this all you have to do is to vote for Kunes and Strohm for county commissioners and in three years more the tax will be so reduced and equalized in Centre county that the poor man can pay his and not feel it.

EMERY'S EXPLANATIONS.

For the past two weeks Senator Emery, of Bradford, had advertised that he would support his charges made against Senator Delamater on Friday evening, September 26th, in the court house at that place. The time come and so did a large congregation of politicians, likewise Emery with his proofs. For about three hours he—Senator Emery—spun out the most mysterious, insignificant lot of explanations that didn't explain and proofs that didn't prove, composed of an overdose of rotten balderdash that Mr. Aonymous told him that Mr. A. had told him that Mr. B. had told him that Mr. C. had overheard somebody else tell one time somewhere although he couldn't really remember when, where or how, the whole dose authenticated and backed up by anonymous, and more than likely bogus, affidavits sworn to and signed by nobody knew whom or wherefrom; and this "political rot" was offered as evidence in substantiation of Emery's vicious; malicious and slanderous charges made against Senator Delamater away last summer.

When Mr. Emery made his arraignment of Mr. Delamater the charges were considered serious and would have been so had they been proven time; but Mr. Delamater's unequivocal and straightout denial made a few weeks ago stamped the whole thing as a falsehood and left no other alternative for Mr. Emery but to prove his assertions or be termed a poltroon and a coward. Now that he has attempted to prove what he once said he has relieved the public pulse to a certain extent, no that anyone at any time since Mr. Delamater's denial believed the charges, in so-far that his concocted evidence proves that he is not the poltroon and coward that was generally supposed, but instead is only a weak, silly fool, the unconscious tool of some designing and more cunning politician who himself was afraid or too smart to allow his name to be coupled with such outlandish and atrocious charges.

That now, after reading Mr. Emery's proof, should there be any who will take the trouble and waste the time to so do, there are those who will accept his proof and believe his charges they only show themselves to be still more silly and brainless than the man who made the charges and then attempted to substantiate them with a lot of anonymous evidence that would not even be heard, let alone accepted, in any court in the State or United States. From this out the enemies of Mr. Delamater will be more careful what they charge Mr. Delamater, however, has reason to feel very grateful to Senator Emery after all as there has not been any one thing done since Mr. Delamater was nominated that will so increase his majority next November as just the actions of Mr. Emery.

PHYSICAL defect is a very poor issue on which to run a political campaign and yet that is just what the democrats are this fall trying to do when they ask votes for Morrison "because he is a cripple." If that would be sufficient excuse for voting for a man why don't every cripple in the county come out for an office and claim the support of the people because of his physical defect? And why don't the democratic papers also say, "we'll have to support Fisher because he is a cripple while John Rupp is a big, stout, hearty man with a good trade and don't need the office." But instead it's vote for Rupp because he has been "tried and not found wanting."

"EX-GOV. PATTISON, Chairman Kerr and their party of orators expect to eat, sleep and live in a hotel, parlor and sleeping car combined during their tour of the State, which began on Monday," says an exchange. Yes, and for all the good it will do they might as well fire off their studied oratory from the rear platform of their car when the train is running at the rate of 50 miles an hour. Their speaking will all go to wind anyway.

LET no Republican lose his vote because he has not paid his tax. Remember next Saturday, October 4th, is the last day on which it can be paid. Attend to it at once!

FOR the past four years or more the Watchman has continually boomed Hon. Leonard Rhone and widely advertised him politically and now when Mr. Meek has a Senatorial bee buzzing in his bonnet Brother Rhone becomes jealous and does his level best to kill Meek's "bee." Truly can it be said that little love hath politicians one for another.

Encourage Their Efforts.

SUBSCRIBE LIBERALLY TO THE FUND FOR A STEAMER IN BELLEFONTE.

As was announced in Tuesday's News a meeting of the Logan Hose Company was held on Tuesday evening to consider the plausibility and possibility of purchasing a fire steamer for Bellefonte. At the meeting it was concluded to try to purchase one for which an opportunity is now presented, and a committee was appointed consisting of Messrs. William T. Hillibish, Frank Wescott and Charles Heisler, to go around and solicit subscriptions to the purchasing fund. $900 must be had and the Logan Hose company heads the subscription with $100, leaving $800 yet to be raised. This should be a small matter for Bellefonte residents and property owners to do and it is to be hoped that all those who possibly can will respond promptly and liberally when asked for their subscription to the fund.

Consider the danger from fire on any of the hills in Bellefonte or even the outlying districts. The property thus located is now all virtually unprotected This was fully demonstrated when Mr. Cowdrick's barn burned a few months ago. Although at that time the reservoir was full yet the streams of water thrown by the hose companies were no stronger than if a hand pump were being used. And that was not near so high as some of the places in Bellefonte. Bellefonte needs a steamer and this is the time to get it. There may never again be an opportunity like this. Remember the offer is good only for 20 days and hence what is done must be done quickly. Don't put off the committee by promises or with 'I'll see about it," but put your name down like a man and opposite it put a good round sum that will demonstrate to the public in general that you are anxious to have the best protection against fire possible to have in Bellefonte, and that will also insure the purchase of this steamer.

W. GAYLOR MORRISON, from all appearances, is paying the expenses of his campaign by furnishing material for the leading editorials in the Watchman and Centre Democrat. It may be a cheap way to get through the campaign but Mr. Morrison will find when the returns come in on the morning of the 5th of next November that it was not a very effective way.

In our time the third finger is usually the one on which the engagement ring is placed, also the wedding ring, some belief possibly existing in the old superstition that a vein ran directly from this part of the left hand to the heart.

PAY your tax on or before Saturday, October 4.

A piece of antiquet brocade is a pretty aipno cover.

IF you want to vote this fall you must pay your tax on or before October 4.

A varnished cane is considered a just provocation of derision, scorn and contumely, and is not to be repeated.

NEXT Saturday is the last day on which to pay your tax. Attend to it at once or you will lose your vote.

DON'T miss your vote because you have not paid your tax. Remember Saturday, October 4th, is the last day on which it can be paid.

A brakeman who lost an arm in the discharge of his duty was awarded $18,000 from the Boston and Albany railroad by a verdict in Boston.

VOTE for John F. Harter for recorder and you will thus put in office a man in whom the people can rely for the faithful performance of his duty.

OUT of the fourteen ballots requried to make a nomination for Congressman at Ridgway last Thursday the Centre county delegation stood by Spangler on 13 ballots and voted for Kerr on the last one.

To "Winddee" Gaylor Morrison When you make your weekly reports to your party organs always stick to the truth. You should know by this time that the record and character of Dr. Harter are unassailable, even among your own party.

THE STATE AND COUNTY CANVASS.

Although the campaign, both in the State and county, has but just begun the indications already point to the election of the State ticket by an overwhelming majority, a good chance for the election of a congressman in this district and of the success of the entire republican county ticket. Senator Delamater, in his personal canvass, so far as he has gone, has succeeded in impressing everybody very favorably and making thousands of votes for himself. His cordiality and fine social qualities never fail to make the right kind of an impression, and then in addition, he has the knack of saying the right thing at the right time and doing the right thing in the right place. That his majority will be anywhere from fifty to eighty thousand we have not the least doubt.

As to the county ticket all that is needed to make success is a little hard work on the part of every good republican. Stir around and see that every vote is gotten out. Don't let there be any stay at home vote. If this is done and a little judicious work is done all along the line every man on the republican ticket will be elected by a good majority.

Victory is already within our grasp, and the democrats see it. They already behold the handwriting on the wall and, in the five weeks yet intervening until election day, they will resort to some desperate measures to carry out their aims and elect their ticket. But don't allow yourself to be deceived by anything they may say: it will all be political bunkum manufactured for the occasion and containing no more body than the froth on a glass of soda water. So again we say go to work at once and work with a will.

LET no Republican lose his vote because he has not paid his tax. Remember next Saturday, October 4th, is the last day on which it can be paid. Attend to it at once.

The Theatre of Life.

The universe is a theatre; the men are either actors or spectators; destiny composes the pieces; luck distributes the characters; at the entrance one receives a ticket marked hope. The rich occupy the boxes; the comfortable or middle classes adorn the gallery; the pit is for the unfortunate. The women are all over and distribute refreshments. The orchestra is formed of all kinds of nonsense; time raises the curtain and the first act begins with screams, tears and sighs. This is followed by laughter, jokes and different illusions The variety of the pieces is very amusing to some, interesting to others afflictive to the majority of them. Upon these illusions follows the calculation of interest; the torments of pride, etc. The metamorphosis of all kinds are operating with a surprising skill and ability. Giants become dwarfs, and dwarfs become giants. After that comes grief, sorrow and affliction. Wise is he who places himself in a corner to observe without being seen Finally, the hell opens itself and all are swallowed up and death draws the curtain of eternity.

PROF A. REHFELD.

They Played in Altoona.

James Reilly and his excellent company scored a success last night in "The Broommaker of Carlsbad." Owing to the fact that the play was a new one, many of the regular patrons did not attend, but they missed a charming performance. The play is clean and well defined, without the first sign of anything objectionable. With regard to Mr. Reilly's impersonation of the title role we can speak in terms of unqualified praise. While bringing all the well known characteristics of German life he refrains from treating us to that exaggerated boisterousness which in stage representations seems so necessaay with some actors for a German part. Without exception every member of the company are artists, while the little children, Master Robbie and little Edna, are phenomenal. We bespeak for the company a crowded house should they play a return date.—Altoona Graphic News.

This company will be in Bellefonte on next Friday evening, October 3rd. If you wan't to see a good play go and see this one.

WOULDN'T there be some fun in the democratic camp if Brother Meek should happen to get the nomination for State Senator and then Rhone would come out as an independent grange candidate? Oh, but wouldn't there, though!

Our Story Teller.

THE EXILES

Yermac had found a more prompt means of aiding them. Pieces of ice of different sizes lay upon the edge of the crevice; he thought he could make a bridge of them, and immediately fell to work. At the first block he removed, Nadege comprehended his generous intention and felt all her hope revive.

Some pieces of ice scattered about in the crevice, following the motion of the water, others fastened themselves to the opposite side of the crevice, and soon the bridge was firm enough for Ladislas first and then Nadege to cross it. The child had no sooner let go his sister's hand than Yermac seized him and drew him over. After this trial, Nadege traversed the bridge of ice without assistance. As to Wab, the animal had followed Ladislas and then returned to Nadege as if to invite her to fear nothing.

Ladislas embraced the chief of police. Nadege knew not how to express her deep gratitude to him for his intervention in the midst of their great danger.

At this moment, Yegor and M. Lafleur, preceded by the two dogs, made their appearance, arriving, not without some trouble, from the west.

They also had suffered, the wind rendering their progress very toilsome by lifting the snow and hurling it in their eyes. This snow thus agitated disarranged their route by forming, as do the shifting sands, ravines, little valleys, and hillocks which they were forced to go around, sinking the knees in a fine dust.

The surprise of the hunters was extreme on seeing Nadege and Ladislas upon the ice, their garments covered with an icy coat and stiff with stalactites, and Yermac beside them, wet also and shining with ice—for he had not spared himself while working. They were soon informed of what had taken place by Ladislas.

"Ah! Monsieur Yermac!" cried Yegor, "you are better than you would have us believe. To-day you have saved the lives of all of us!"

But, after the joy of finding each other again safe and sound, there was a disappointment—the hunters had brought back nothing from their rough day's chase.

As to the chief of police, the day had been favorable to him. Once again he was square with Yegor. It was a good omen for him.

CHAPTER XXVIII.—THE TCHOUKTCHIS.

There was no change in the disheartening situation of the fugitives, except, apparently, an alteration in th arrangements of the chief of police. Yermac's attitude was less haughty. He allowed himself to be a trifle familiar with the lad and the young girl whom he had saved from certain death; but the exiles felt that he maintained a reserve from which he would not depart. His cold kindness resembled that of a jailer to whom prisoners are confided; his consideration and willingness to help did not go beyond a certain limit fixed in advance. Besides, he persisted in refusing to touch the few provisions which appeared upon the common table.

In the midst of their penury, with famine threatening them if the Yakoutes did not soon return, the fugitives had a stroke of good luck.

Wab succeeded in capturing unaided a deer of the same species as that recently killed by Yermac. The dog leaped at its throat and did not let go until the animal was strangled. This exploit accomplished, the brave dog returned to the hut, and displayed such a desire to have Yegor follow it that the young man did so, the dog leading him to the spot where the victim lay. The two other dogs were keeping guard over the precious prey. The deer was drawn triumphantly to the hut and the dogs were not forgotten, especially Wab.

Yermac, still inflexible, limited himself to remarking that his deer was larger than that killed by Wab.

M. Lafleur, seeing the difficulty of placing his hand on a bear, fell back upon the seals. He made a harpoon and used the Siberian dogs to discover the retreats of the amphibious creatures. The dogs, gifted with keen scent, led him to a number of those narrow openings that the seals make in the ice and through which they breathe—and get harpooned. The Parisian, despite cold and hunger, passed days and nights in watching for a prey that defied his inexperience as a fisherman, as the bears had defied his lack of skill as a hunter.

Finally, supreme succor reached the fugitives one evening in the shape of two old Tchouktchis, male and female. Suffering from hunger and thirst—for thirst is as imperious and difficult to satisfy in these deserts of snow as it can be in those deserts where the sun scorches the sands—they had come from the Bay of Tchaounsk and were going along the coast in search of a station of natives, there to beg for some provisions. They had perceived the smoke escaping from the roof of the hut and had come to ask for hospitality.

"Toroma!" said they, in one voice, as they entered. This meant good evening.

Yegor regretted the absence of his faithful Tekel, who knew a little of the language of the Tchouktchis, and answered at random:

"Toroma!"

From their miserable looks more than their gestures, the fugitives understood what they wanted, and, although the supply of provisions was approaching the end, the two poor wretches had for supper enough to furnish the two meals of the next day, and that succeeding, for their appetites seemed immense, their hunger insatiable.

The type of these natives recalled the Mongolian type of the old world, combined with the type of the Indians of the north of America—of Behring's Strait—a field of solid ice for a part of the year serving as a bond of union between the two races as between the two continents.

The man wore several reindeer skin blouses; his head was covered with a hairy hood which also covered his shoulders beneath his outside garment. His shoes were made of bear skin with the hair on the exterior. His wife, who was covered with a number of tunics, tied at the hem so as to form pantaloons and with sleeves open at the wrists, had her face tattooed with stripes of dark blue.

Despite the hunger which tortured him, the Tchouktchis seemed deeply impressed by Nadege's beauty which was altogether new to him. He could not take from her his admiring and curious eyes, and, as he examined her, he entered into a talk with his wife in which the word kamakay was often repeated. (A kamakay is a chief of a tribe.)

Then, after having noticed M. Lafleur's harpoon in a corner, the Tchouktchi seemed astonished that he had not been given slices of seal fat to eat. M. Lafleur made him understand by gestures that he had tried to capture seals, but without success. At this, the native, designating himself by striking his chest and pointing to the harpoon and dogs, promised to give, as soon as day dawned, a lesson to the Parisian whom he took for a Russian.

The next day, in fact, the native was not long in harpooning a seal. Guided by the dogs, he reached a breathing-hole of these creatures. Then, he sounded the snow with the harpoon to the depth of two or three feet; for the seal cuts its breathing-hole through the ice, but stops at the coating of snow. The little opening found, the fisherman waited patiently and in silence until the seal came to breathe the air. At the second or third breath, the harpoon, swiftly penetrating the snow, plunged into the head of the animal.

The seal dived, and drew out to its full length the line prepared in advance, which was fifteen yards long. This line is fastened to the iron of the harpoon and the other extremity is in the hand of the harpooner. The breathing-hole of the seal, immediately cleared of the snow which covered it, was enlarged so as to permit the passage of the body of the animal when it should become exhausted. The native speedily drew the seal from the hole and carried it to their hut.

There, after the lesson in fishing, took place the lesson in cooking.

While the man cut up the seal, the woman, in order to be useful, made oil for the lamp by chewing pieces of the fat of the animal. She toiled so arduously at her singular work that she soon filled a wooden jar with oil of her manufacture.

The seal cut up, the native, by way of example, stretched himself upon his back to be fed by his wife with pieces of the fat, which she stuffed in his mouth as one stuffs a chicken.

"It's all over!" cried M. Lafleur, after partaking of the seal fat. "You no longer need be uneasy about my food, my friends. As long as there are ice and seals, I shall not be a burden to you and will abandon to you my share of everything else!"

Yermac, who had allowed to be piled up before him seal steaks, raw liver, and slices of fat, hesitated what to do. He had not tasted of the deer strangled by Wab, and for very many days his food had been terribly lacking both in quality and quantity. At length, he decided to taste the seal flesh, and followed the example of the Parisian.

The Tchouktchi, having met with success, no longer hesitated about swallowing all the pieces of the seal within his reach. He ate pounds and pounds of it, and, when he had reached the last stages of repletion, threw himself flat upon the floor of the hut, abandoning himself to the gigantic work of digestion.

The next day, the natives, revictualled for a time, departed without ceremony, carrying away the remains of the seal and stealing a small and curiously worked skin bag in which matches were kept.

The fugitives soon had reason to repent of the kind reception they had given them.

Meanwhile, M. Lafleur profited by their teachings. One day, after having harpooned a seal, he drew it out of its hole. As he knelt upon the ice, he felt himself familiarly tapped upon the shoulder and thought that Ladislas had come up behind him. He pulled the harpoon from the flesh of the animal, but the hand upon his shoulder grew heavier. The Parisian turned and nearly fell backward on perceiving a huge white bear which had watched the details of the harpooning and shamelessly claimed the animal captured. The bear, taking advantage of the deference shown it by M. Lafleur, who yielded place to it, as may readily be believed, seized upon the seal and carried it off, without as much as a growl of thanks, in the direction of its den. From that moment, M. Lafleur no longer went harpooning unless armed with his gun.

The chief of police had, it seems, acquired a taste of seal flesh. After having followed the Parisian once or twice, he borrowed his harpoon and succeeded in capturing a superb seal, the best cuts of the fat of which he carefully laid aside.

This astonished Yegor.

"What does he want with that supply of fat!" asked he of M. Lafleur.

What did he want with it? Seeing that the Yakoutes did not return, he was resolutely thinking of flight and getting ready his provisions for his journey.

CHAPTER XXIX.—THE ICE-BOUND SHIP AND ITS SKELETON CREW.

Nadege and Ladislas had much repugnance for seal flesh—perhaps, because they had tasted the strange food preparations of the native couple who had visited them—that M. Lafleur induced Yegor to resume hunting the white bear.

Hunger was making itself cruelly felt in the hut, when one morning Yegor and his friend went courageously upon the frozen surface of the sea. The cold, very sharp for some days past, had solidified it, this time, beyond all danger of accident.

The hunters walked for more than four miles among the heaps of broken ice blocks which formed the hummocks adhering to the shore. The two Siberian dogs accompanied them. Wab had been left at the hut for the security of Nadege and Ladislas.

They arrived in front of broad and lofty icebergs, which had come there from afar off, from the west, doubtless, and probably from the coast of Greenland where the mountains of ice incessantly detach themselves, with the crash of thunder, from immense glaciers often more than fifty miles in extent.

Suddenly, from the summit of a painfully climbed iceberg, Yegor saw, hidden, buried behind enormous icy masses, a stout ribbed ship, motionless and enclosed in a field of ice. He uttered a cry of surprise and pointed out his discovery to M. Lafleur, who at that moment rejoined him.

Upon the frozen and greenish white sea, where the whiteness of the snow imitated the foam of the waves, the black carcass of the ship stood out darkly, with white network spread by the snow over all the parts in relief, as if to bring out the hues of morning. But the deck, the masts, the yards and the cordage, covered with beautiful star-shaped snow crystals, which shone with a thousand lustres in the sun, drove by this first impression, substituting for the comparison of a gigantic gewgaw of

The first movement of Yegor and M. Lafleur was to retreat down the side of the iceberg, which would hide them, and from whence they could observe whether they had to deal with friends or enemies. The ship bore neither sails nor flag; the thick, square shape of its ribs was that of the fishing vessels which face the dangers of the navigation of the polar seas. The dogs barked. They silenced them.

After half a minute's attention, M. Lafleur saw moving on board a creature enveloped in an animal's skin; perhaps, the lookout of the ship had seen and was watching them.

"We are observed!" said M. Lafleur.

"Wait a little, my friend," answered Yegor, who saw the dogs with their hair standing on end; and with the words, aiming his gun, he fired at the so-called lookout.

"What are you doing?" cried M. Lafleur, alarmed.

"I was sure that it was not a man!" said Yegor, with a laugh. "Let go the dogs!"

A huge white bear shook itself upon the deck, perplexed by the hiss of the ball about its ears.

"It is a bear!" cried the Parisian, "and the first we have met to-day."

The two dogs were already running around the ship, barking furiously, but keeping at a prudent distance.

"But the ship!" said Yegor, with some constraint. "It is, perhaps, the phantom ship of the legends."

"Those legends are laughed at on the banks of the Seine," observed the Parisian. "For us, this enormous bulk of wood is nothing else, to all appearances, than the den of a bear—some ship abandoned by its crew."

"Very likely," said Yegor, "and in that case we will, perhaps, find in it supplies that will enable us to dispense with pursuing our unprofitable hunt."

"As to the bear," said M. Lafleur, "it is upon a territory to which we have a much better right."

"The least we can do is to dislodge it," said Yegor.

The bear had disappeared. It had, without doubt, taken refuge in the between-decks.

The two hunters glided to the base of the iceberg, and approached the vessel without further delay. Yegor quickly recognized it as a Dutch whaler.

Soon they reached the round sides of the ship. They hailed—no one answered.

"Evidently there is not a living soul on board!" said Yegor,

"Otherwise, we would have to believe that the bear was tame!" observed M. Lafleur.

They climbed upon the deck, leaving their dogs on the ice, and there a horrible spectacle presented itself to their gaze.

Five men—five skeletons clad in sailor's garments—were stretched upon the deck, amid objects and wrecks of all sorts.

"Poor fellows!" cried Yegor.

In their horror, they forgot the bear. Nevertheless, the sound of steps was heard below.

"Attention!" cried M. Lafleur. "That must be the bear!"

The dogs continued to bark as if to keep them on the lookout.

At this moment the white head of a bear appeared at one of the hatchways, with its pointed muzzle, its open and menacing mouth and its ferocious looking red eyes.

Yegor, without loss of time, lodge a ball in the animal's neck. Mortally wounded, it bounded with rage towards its assailant. M. Lafleur fired in his turn; but he hit the bear on the ear, and the creature paid no attention to such a trifle.

Yegor, on seeing it advance towards him, endeavored to snatch a hatchet that lay within reach of his hand; he seized it, but the hatchet was soldered to the deck by the ice and resisted every effort to loosen it. All would have been over with Yegor, if the Parisian, quickly springing forward, the butt of his gun in the air, had not dealt upon the animal's head so terrible a blow that the weapon broke. The animal, a little disconcerted only, was hesitating between M. Lafleur and Yegor, when the latter, who had succeeded in disengaging the hatchet, lifted it as high as he could reach, and, bringing it down with all his strength, broke the skull of the terrible beast. When he saw it stretched on the deck, he finished it with two or three well directed blows. Little did he care about mangling the fur.

"All honor to you!" cried M. Lafleur. "At last we will have a roast!"

"Oh! never for our table!" exclaimed Yegor, with a look of disgust. And he called his companion's attention to the fact that the bones of the corpses, especially the skulls, had been gnawed by bears.

"But," said M. Lafleur, "was the bear we have killed the one we mistook for a lookout? We had better be careful, for the dogs continue to bark!"

The Parisian was right, for scarcely had he finished speaking when another bear, an enormous one—it was the female—rose up menacingly from behind a pile of boxes that the snow had converted into a slope.

"Attention!" cried Yegor.

Yegor lifted his hatchet, M. Lafleur, drawing back a few steps, unsheathed his huge hunting-knife. But the bear, astonished at this reception and these defensive preparations, made a half turn and ran away, growling, prudently looking behind it to assure itself that it was not too closely pursued.

The hunters allowed it without opposition to slide down the side of the ship, pursued by the barking of the dogs, which they strove to restrain by reiterated calls, and when they saw it run over the hummocks towards the ice hills, they experienced great relief.

"Decidedly," observed M. Lafleur, "this kind of a hunt is too exciting for my temperament. If we only find here some boxes of biscuit, they will be of great help to us during the winter."

"But suppose the bears have devoured everything!" said Yegor.

M. Lafleur made a grimace.

"We shall soon know about that," said he.

They went to the hatchway and descended to the between-decks. A spectacle more horrible still than that on deck awaited them there—the bones and skulls of ten corpses transformed this place into a veritable charnel-house.

"Why were not the first who died buried by the others!" asked Yegor of M. Lafleur.

"Because, my friend," replied the latter, "the entire crew must have been stricken with that terrible disease known as the scurvy. Those who have it are attacked by an intolerable stiffness of the legs; they limp; they can neither sleep nor even rest; they lose all appetite, and their inflamed gums are extremely painful, while a general weakness of the body promptly comes on—it is the indication of approaching dissolution. The death of these brave mariners must have occurred last winter. But what is, in this between-decks which is carefully stopped up and in which the air has not been renewed, we ourselves should take the scurvy!"

"It is easily taken, then!"

"Yes; but always under like conditions."

"Such is, happily, not the case with us. Let us have some air and go straight to the provisions."

With his hatchet which he still retained possession of, Yegor cut the ropes which closed the scuttles. Air and light penetrated into the between decks.

"We inherit everything," said M. Lafleur.

"On one condition."

"What is that!"

"That we give sepulture to the remains of these unfortunates."

"Agreed. But look—they possessed an organ."

"It was, without doubt, to abridge the weariness of the long winter."

Beside the stove, in company with the coal-box, a hand-organ stood upon a low table. M. Lafleur turned the handle, and, by a sort of poignant irony, the instrument gave vent to some strains of a gay dance air.

Then, Yegor and M. Lafleur, affected in the highest degree by the contrast of this lively music with the heart-rending picture before them, felt tears come into their eyes.

On the organ was a large book.

Yegor glanced at it—it was a Dutch Bible. Upon the margins of the book could be read, traced by the failing hand of the captain, the names of the first sailors who died, followed by some sad reflections. Yegor, who knew English and German, understood enough of the Dutch language to obtain from this record the explanation of this tragedy of the polar seas. The whaler had been surprised by the ice at the Island of Barentz, belonging to the Spitzbergen group. M. Lafleur had not been wrong in considering the scurvy the active cause of the death of all the crew.

The name of the captain figured a little further on in these lububrious pages. His second in command had taken up the pen and had passed it, in his turn, to a survivor. The last marginal note read thus:

"But four of us are left: Molis Stoke, of Haarlem, sailor; Dijrk Hooft, called the Spreker, of Medenblik, sailor; Heymann Jaarsveldt, of Elburg, our ship-boy, and myself, Alberdingk Huijdecoper, of Rotterdam, chief cook. We have no longer the strength to assist each other. Something horrible may possibly happen—what if the white bears which are prowling around the ship should come on board and devour us alive!"

"Poor men!" thought Yegor, as he closed the Bible. "That is probably what took place!"

Already M. Lafleur was searching everywhere. From time to time, while Yegor was running over the margins of the Bible, he cried:

"Lard!—biscuit!—rum!—concentrated milk!—fifty boxes of it! The preserved meat has been eaten by the bears! Twenty pots of pemmican!—sugar! Oh!—flour!—bottles of red wine and a box of candles—intact! More biscuit!—a cask full! A package of vermicelli! Chocolate!—twenty pounds at least! But what havoc! The foxes have aided the bears! Green beans in boxes! Sardines in oil!"

"Well, my dear friend," said Yegor to him, "let us bundle up some of these things and carry them away. We will carefully close the scuttles."

"What if we should not find the whales again!"

"Oh! the sea is as solid as a rock. But let us load ourselves with as much as our strength will permit."

"I see some matches."

"Take them. They will replace those stolen from us the other day by the Tchouktchis."

"There is some charcoal!"

"We can do without that. Give preference to those articles which will restore the strength of Nadege and her brother."

Two hours afterwards, Yegor and the Parisian, bending beneath their loads, were bearing to the hut the first installment of what they had found. M. Lafleur had wished to take the organ, claiming that a little music would cheer the party up; Ladislas would turn the handle and he would accompany him on his pocket violin. Yegor had some trouble to dissuade him from it; as to himself, he bore away the Bible.

They reached the hut, enjoying in advance the happiness they were about to cause.

"We shall see," observed M. Lafleur, "if Yermac will turn up his nose at the milk and sugar, the sardines in oil and the salted lard!"

The two dogs preceded them.

Yegor was surprised at not seeing Wab come to meet him. A presentiment of evil stole upon him. He laid all he was carrying on the ice and ran towards the hut, calling Nadege and Ladislas.

At last, he entered the hut. It was empty. Nadege, Ladislas, and Yermac were nowhere to be seen. The fire had long since died out. Marks of a struggle were everywhere.

M. Lafleur rejoined him. He found him in dismay.

"What does all this mean!"

"I do not know—I cannot understand it My reason totters—and I feel as if I were going to die!"

"Where could they have gone!"

"I cannot imagine; but I am convinced that a terrible misfortune has happened! Look, Monsieur Lafleur—the table is overturned, the furs are scattered and soiled, and there are ashes as far as the door. They have taken one of our guns."

"And also my harpoon," said the Parisian. "Could Yermac have made a stroke in his peculiar fashion!"

"What stroke could he have made!" asked Yegor, dreading to hear his friend's reply.

"Carry off Nadege and the child," answered he, "to force us to retrace our steps, to deliver ourselves up to him when he should be backed by some force or other."

"Oh! that would be odious!" cried Yegor. "What shall we do! Shall we set out in pursuit of them without loss of time! But I am annihilated, incapable of walking a step. Let us examine the tracks on the snow."

They lighted their lantern, for night had come on, and went out.

The snow was trodden all around the hut. The footprints led to a mound, behind which it was easy to see that a sledge drawn by several reindeer had been stationed. From thence they could follow over the hardened snow the direction taken by the sledge.

"A narta!" cried Yegor—"and we can only pursue them on foot! We shall never overtake them! Oh! what a day! and this Yermac—!"

"I begin to think that he must have had a hand in this business," said M. Lafleur.

"If he were not its author, he would be here—he would have defended Nadege and the child. In his place, I would have fought for them while I had life! It must have been Yermac. He has taken advantage of some circumstance, of some chance."

"But," said the Parisian, suddenly, "the sledge has not gone towards the Russian possessions."

"You are right," answered Yegor, astonished that he himself had not noticed this fact.

"At this advanced hour and fatigued as we are, it would be difficult for us to set out. Believe me, Yegor, it is better for us to wait until to-morrow. In the meanwhile, perhaps, we may be enlightened by some revealing indication. Come in, my friend; after our fatigue and our emotions, the cold will seize upon us—come."

Yegor allowed himself to be drawn along by his friend, without making the least resistance.

CHAPTER XXX.—WAB'S INTELLIGENCE.

What a sad evening that was, passed at the corner of the fire, while the winter wind blew violently without.

Yegor and M. Lafleur looked at each other, without daring to exchange their painful reflections. They had joyously brought all sorts of provisions, but they touched nothing.

"Even the dog," murmured Yegor, "even the dog—all gone! It is inexplicable. Wab would never willingly have followed Yermac. What are we to think? What must we decide upon?"

At this moment they heard a barking out-of-doors.

"It is the Siberian dogs," said M. Lafleur

Yegor listened attentively.

"No; it is Wab," said he, rising; "but the animal is worried by something—perhaps wounded."

And he opened the door of the hut.

It was, indeed, Wab. The creature bounded in and laid at its master's feet the little silk embroidered reindeer skin bag which the Tchouktchis had stolen from them a few days before.

"Look!" cried Yegor. "Those beggars who came here have had something to do with our misfortune. Wab has brought back the bag they robbed us of. The animal must have followed Nadege to their village."

Wab leaped upon Yegor, licking his hands and uttering little cries of joy. The young man caressed the animal with a tenderness justified by the fidelity and intelligence it had displayed.

"We noticed," said M. Lafleur, "that the Tchouktchis, who came from the east, retraced their steps instead of going towards the west as was very probably at first their intention. The tracks of the sledge also go to the east. Evidently, Wab has returned from their hut, which signifies that their village is not far distant from here. But what role must we assign to the chief of police in all this?"

"That is a very difficult matter to determine!" answered Yegor.

"At least we possess some indications," said the Parisian. "I now recall the strange fashion in which the native stared at Nadege, while speaking to his wife of his kamakay."

"You have hit it, my excellent friend!" cried Yegor. "This chief of their tribe has come here in consequence of the report of the two natives. Oh! my poor Nadege! In what affliction she must be! But the chief of police!"

"We always come back to him!" exclaimed the Parisian.

The latter had scarcely ceased speaking when a faint voice uttered his name.

"Who calls me!" asked he, growing slightly pale.

"Monsieur Lafleur!" again repeated the voice.

The two watchers raised their heads. This name had fallen from above, through the aperture made in the roof for the escape of the smoke.

"Well! here is the chief of police!" cried Yegor.

"Open the door!" again said the voice.

"You think it is he, do you!" demanded M. Lafleur, a trifle reassured. "I will admit him then. Those skeletons, those bones which we saw to-day, together with the strange surprise which awaited us on our return, have completely upset me."

An instant afterwards, Yermac entered the hut behind M. Lafleur.

"Can one ask where you have been!" said M. Lafleur to him, roughly. "Certainly, we have not been in the habit of troubling you about your movements; but things have happened here which make us desire to know why you return at this hour of the night!"

"To what things do you allude!" asked the chief of police, who now perceived the disorder of the hut and Yegor's dejection and divined the absence of Nadege and her brother. "Has some misfortune occurred!" added he, questioning instead of replying "Nadege!—Ladislas!"

"Gone!" said Yegor.

"Upon the sea, as was the case the other day!—or lost along the coast!"

"Abducted!" said M. Lafleur. "When we arrived, everything here was in extreme disorder."

"Abduction!—violence!" murmured Yermac, suddenly resuming his role of chief of police. "But," added he, in a loud voice and almost with an accent of triumph, "how could you expose a young girl and a child to such risks as you are running! It would have been a hundred times better to have gone back when I summoned you to do so! Then I would have interceded in your behalf with the governor of Yakoutsk. But, now," said Yermac, changing his tone, "this young lady and her brother, the poor little Pole, are in the power of a sanguinary tribe in rebellion against the Czar's authority, whose laws are made only by the chamans, and who, despite the fact that a large number of natives have been baptized, still offer human sacrifices! See what your ingenious plans have brought you to, Monsieur Semenoff!"

"We shall all die, perhaps," answered Yegor, with a deep sigh, "but we shall die free!"

"Free! That is but a word!" said Yermac.

"A word, Monsieur—the chief of police!" cried the Parisian. "With that word many things are done. I, who was born on the Place de la Bastille, can assure you of that with a full knowledge of the facts. Vive la liberte! But," added M. Lafleur, "you do not tell us where you have been."

"Where I have been," answered Yermac "Ah! do not ask me!"

With these words, he sat down beside the fire, his elbows upon his knees and his head in his hands.

HASTINGS FOR CONGRESS.

Why not Nominate the General Who Could Undoubtedly be Elected.

Owing to the democratic nomination for Congress in this district made at Ridgway on Thursday, and because of the defeat of James Kerr, wouldn't it now be wise for the Republicans to put up a man who could and would be elected: In looking around for such a man who could be found more suitable, more able, more sure to be elected than just our own General D. H. Hastings. There is not another man in the state, and certainly not another man in this congressional district, who is more popular or who would be more sure of being elected than just the General. His friends are legion—irrespective of party and politics, and the success of the entire republican ticket in all the counties comprising this district would be largely assured with the General on the ticket as a candidate for Congress. Let all the conferrees carefully consider, when they meet together in convention for the purpose of putting a man in nomination, and act wisely. We call on them to nominate General Hastings and Pennsylvania will send one more republican congressman to Washington.

How Girls Can be Pretty.

You come back to town richer in flesh more determined to success, but just wondering a little bit at the way the kisses of the sun and the browning that flashed from the waves have affected your skin. There is no use in telling you that freckles and sunburn are becoming; you do not contradict your brothers when they tell you this, but in your heart you do not believe they quite know.

The trouble having been stated, the remedy must be found. First, your blood must be gotten into a good condition by using a tonic for it. This may be a little eau de cologne or some alcohol in the water in which you bathe your face, neck and arms; it will have an almost instantaneous effect, and you will be conscious of a glowing, exhilarated condition.

Then at night use some fine cosmetic. There are many perfectly harmless ones that are more pleasant than vaseline or olive oil, though both of these are equally good.

Drink milk twice a day, and remember that it must be ordinary milk, not cream. It is said to be more whitening to the skin than anything applied on the outside, and surely it is at once pleasant and healthy.

Elder-flower water, lemon-juice and rose-water are all simple remedies for freckles, and will undoubtedly remove them if they are regularly used and allowed to dry on the skin. A famous beauty is said to keep her hands white by always using the half of a lemon in washing her hands, exactly as she would a piece of soap; and, although freckles come, still nothing is so good for the skin as sunshine; it makes the underskin flush, and a delicate pink and white is the result. A little care about a broad-brimmed hat, and a good-sized sun-umbrella will give you all the good desired from sunshine and keep away its defects. Keep on the sunny-side of the street in the winter. You know that is the place chosen by Englishmen, Southern women and dogs, so the friends will look at the good skins of all three, and use the proverb to point a moral and adorn a tail. —Ladies' Home Journal.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

He Had a Wife at Home.

'I have a little Bible at home,' said the bad man, 'that in 1868 I wrested from a Sunday-school class of 19. I haven't opened it since, and it is as new and clean as the day I got it.'

'Bring it down some day; I'd like to see it,' said his friend carelessly.

The next day the bad man came into his friend's office and, throwing a little half-worn-out book on the desk he said:

'There she is, old man, but I was a little wrong about its condition.'

'I should say so,' said the other; 'how does it happen that this little book is so badly worn, when you thought it was clean and all right at home?'

'Well,' said the bad man, and his voice was a bit husky, 'the truth of the matter is I've got a little wife up at the house and a couple of youngjones. They sometimes rummage through my things.'

Mr. D. Goode Work (to Prodigal Son)—I suppose, Richard, it's pretty expensive maintaining churches in the city; about how much a year do you pay in that direction?

Prodigal Son (evasively)—Oh! you needn't worry about having to foot any bills of that kind, father; my church expenses 'll never break me, nor you, neither. When it comes to that, I always remember your counsel, and pay as I go.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Vreelands Minstrels Excellent.—The "Irish Corporal" Next Then the "Broom Maker."

A large audience was assembled in the opera house on Thursday night to hear the singing and witness the performance of Vreeland's Minstrels. The company came well recommended for a new company and, to their credit be it said, there was nothing at all amateurish about their performance on Thursday night. The programme was a very long one and notwithstanding that fact they gave some things in addition that were not down on the bills. Larry McEvoy and Arthur Dening were two favorites, they were both heartily applauded whenever they appeared before the footlights and were encored several times. Mr. Vreeland may well be proud of his company as it can easily be pronounced the best minstrel show that ever performed in Bellefonte and, in former years there were some good ones. The playing of the Silver Cornet band is simply ravishing. We hope Manager Garman can secure them again for next season.

Especial mention is due Mr. Larry McEvoy for the very efficient manner in which he has succeeded in drilling the company in the various drills and marches rendered. These prove a very pleasant and taking variation from the general programme of singing, dancing and humorous conversation. Considering the fact that the company has only been on the road about three weeks we pronounce it exceedingly fine.

The Ladies' Home Journal.

Few better numbers of a popular magazine have ever been issued than is the October Ladies' Home Journal. From cover to cover, the number bristles with an array of splendid articles, poems and stories seldom brought together in a single issue. P. T. Barnum tells, in a very entertaining manner, the secret of "How I Have Grown Old;" Mrs. Ulysses Grant describes her courtship with the General, and how the warrior proposed marriage to her; the methods pursued by the Vanderbilts in the training of their children are freshly sketched; Mrs. Margaret Bottome, the President of "The King's Daughters," begins most admirably with what will hereafter be a regular department entirely devoted to "The King's Daughters;" Robert J. Burdette has a first-class humorous article on old people who try to be young; A. Bogardus, the pioneer New York photographer, has an exceedingly bright sketch on "Presidents I Have Photographed;" Dr. Talmage has some very bright things for women, Emma V. Sheridan, the Boston actress, tells how to conduct private theatricals; "Curi Papers and Husbands" is the unique title of a bright paper by Felicia Holt; Florence Howe Hall gives valuable hints in an article telling how to celebrate "Wedding Anniversaries;" and then come contributions, almost without number, from Harriet Prescott Spofford, Mrs. Lyman Abbott, Lee C. Harby, Sarah K. Bolton, Edward W. Bok, Ellen Le Grade, Kate Tannatt Woods, and a score of others. The October Journal is truly a perfect model of what a popular magazine should be. Published, at one dollar a year, by the Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia.

Getting it Down Too Fine.

A four year old boy, whom we will call Jimmy, lived not long ago with his parents on one of the numerous East End streets which we will designate by the name of Mud.

Multitudes of East Enders will recognize their own avenue under this name. That is, if they dig deep enough to reach it.

Later Jimmy's parents moved to a paved street, and his mamma gave him this little lecture:

"Now, Jimmy, you must not get yourself all muddled up, as you used to. We live on an asphalt street now, and you have no excuse for not keeping clean."

Soon after this Jimmy was playing near his new home with some bad boys, and he picked up a profane word or two.

On making use of these words in the presence of his mamma, he was severely reprimanded, whereupon he inquired:

"Can't a fellow even talk on an asphalt street.

An advertisement appeared a short time ago in a provincial paper for a woman to 'wash, iron and milk one or two cows.' We can understand the cows wanting milking, but why on earth they require washing and ironing is beyond our comprehension.

TRIED TO BLOW THEM UP

The Boy King of Servia and His Father Had a Close Call.

A BOMB THROWING FIEND.

He Hurls the Deadly Explosive Under the Royal Carriages—Ex-King Milan's Vehicle Badly Wrecked, but No One Was Injured.

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—Vossische Zeitung prints a special from Belgrade giving details of an attempt on the lives of the boy king of Servia, Alexander I, and his father. Although the officials are making every effort to suppress the facts, it is ascertained that the incident occurred as the royal party were returning from a drive on Sunday afternoon.

There were two carriages, the first being occupied by the young monarch, the second by ex-King Milan. A bomb exploded under the latter vehicle, badly wrecking and tearing away the rear section.

THE BOY KING.

Whether the explosive was intended for Alexander or his father seems to be a matter of doubt, but as to its being thrown the intense excitement which it has created among the populace, and the efforts of the authorities to minimize the incident, there is no doubt whatever.

Although no one was injured, the king's tutor, Dr. Dokitsch, who was riding in the damaged vehicle, was evidently badly frightened, as he has since resigned, saying that his life is worth more to him than his position.

Treason in the Russian Army.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 1.—It transpires that during the recent army maneuvers at Revno four officers serving under Gen. Gourko were placed under arrest charged with conspiring against the government. Copies of a pamphlet inspired by Polish revolutionists were found in the possession of the arrested officers. The pamphlets urged the peoples of Russia and Poland to offer a common resistance to the government of the czar, and the officers of the Russian army were appealed to to free the country from despotism.

A Vatican Sensation.

ROME, Oct. 1.—The excommunication by the Vatican authorities of the theological faculty of the University of Coimbra, Portugal, and the prohibition of a new ordination of priests in 1890, has caused a considerable sensation.

Fears are entertained that, owing to the delicacy of the political situation in Portugal, serious consequences will follow this action.

The Vatican is charged with having shown a lack of prudence in the premises.

The Crispi Interview Denied.

ROME, Oct. 1.—The Capitan Fracassa in its issue Tuesday morning denies that any such remarks were made by Premier Crispi as those attributed to him by The Figaro, of Paris. The Capitan Fracassa says that in an interview had with the Italian minister its representative was twice told that no conversation had been had with any one representing The Figaro.

Captain and Crew Massacred.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Information has reached here of the massacre by natives of Capt. Hedley, owner of the cutter Isabel, of Hartlepool, together with the crew of the vessel, while engaged in fishing for pearls off the coast of New Guinea. After the murder of all on board the Papuar savages looted and scuttled the cutter.

What Does This Mean?

PARIS, Oct. 1.—At Cannes a German woman has been placed under arrest for having in her possession a number of charts of the fortress, as well as plans of other defensive works of the place.

Hanged Himself with His Suspenders.

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—Count Kleist, who recently committed an atrocious assault upon an innkeeper, committed suicide in prison yesterday by hanging himself with his suspenders.

MURDER, THEN SUICIDE.

Terrible Result of a Family Dispute About Property.

A WILD REIGN OF BULLETS.

A Man Attacks His Relatives in the Street with a Club, Then Blazes Away, Killing His Stepniece and Finally Shoots Himself.

LOWELL, Mass., Oct. 1.—John Q. Nichols murdered his stepniece and shot himself on Appleton street Tuesday. The murder was the result of a dispute about the property of the late Jacob Nichols, who died, leaving a considerable estate, about two years ago. The estate was administered upon in the usual manner, but not to the satisfaction of John Q. Nichols, who claimed a share of it. John was half brother to Jacob, and about half his age.

Twenty-five years ago, when John was a boy, Jacob took him into his second hand furniture store in Middlesex street, where he became of essential importance in the business; but while Jacob became wealthy John was paid a pittance that scarcely sufficed for the support of himself and family. John was ready to tell his troubles, and by reason of the fact that Jacob Nichols had the reputation of driving close bargains and of being hard upon his half brother the latter found many sympathizers.

The Cause.

The story goes that John by close economy had saved $28,000, which shortly before Jacob's death he intrusted to the latter to invest. According to John's story this sum passed into Jacob's estate, and has been inaccessible to its owner. He has tried repeatedly to recover it, and has badgered the family of the deceased until its members have grown to have a great fear of him.

On Monday, the 22d inst., he forced an entrance into the splendid mansion built by Jacob Nichols, and demanded to see Mrs. Nichols, the widow, who, being afraid, declined to see him, and John, after a violent scene, was thrust out of the house by her grandson, Fred Nichols, of Freedom, Me., who with his wife was staying in the house.

That afternoon a warrant for trespass was sworn out against John. He was arrested and arraigned, and the case was continued till Tuesday morning. John was seen hanging about the neighborhood of the Nichols mansion for an hour before the members of the family, who were witnesses against him in the trespass case, started for the court.

The Tragedy.

They left the house at 9:20 o'clock and John intercepted them in Appleton street. He pulled a club from under his coat and raised to strike Fred Nichols, but the latter wrenched it away. John pulled a revolver and fired, but Fred dodged behind a tree and escaped unhurt into a horse car with his wife.

John then turned upon Mrs. Ida Cunningham, of Reading, Mrs. Nichols' daughter, and her son Walter, aged 19. Seizing the latter he wrestled with him for a moment and then throwing him off fired his revolver at him, but missed.

Mrs. Cunningham fled across the street. Against her John had an especial spite. Chasing her he raised his pistol and fired one shot, which struck the woman in the palm of the left hand, coming out over the thumb on the back.

He then blazed away again, the next shot striking the poor woman to the ground in her death agony. Then the infuriated man turned his pistol on himself, and he dropped to the ground weltering in his blood.

The greatest excitement prevails over the wild occurrence.

Kicking on the "Pluck Me" System.

RICHMOND, Mo., Oct. 1.—The strike of the coal miners near Camden, which has been in operation about five weeks, is assuming a serious aspect. The striking men object to the system of supply stores of the company, which they claim are run on the "pluck me" plan. They also wish the semi-monthly payment of wages restored. Saturday about thirty new men were brought to the mines, but the strikers refused to allow them to go to work. It is feared violence will ensue if the company insists on putting new men to work. About 400 miners are idle.

Beaten to Death by Toughs.

MOUNT MORRIS, N. Y., Oct. 1.—William Joslyn, who arrived here from Mount Clemens, Mich., to which place he removed from here several years ago, was assaulted by a gang of roughs in front of the Scoville house and beaten to death. All of the gang—Jerry Kaeton, Jerry Kaeton, second, Fred Dygert and Daniel Kaeton—are in custody. The murdered man has a wife and two children at Mount Clemens. He is a brother of F. M. Joslyn, of this place, and was formerly in the livery business here.

Shot Her Lover Dead.

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 1.—Amanda Oleson, a petite and charming dressmaker, shot Charles W. Hall, the barkeeper for a leading Salt Lake City sporting man. Hall had been paying attention to the Oleson girl and refused to marry her. Driven to desperation, Miss Oleson provided herself with a pistol, and meeting Hall on the street shot him dead.

Death of Ex-Governor Hoyt's Wife.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 1.—Mrs. Mary Loveland Hoyt, wife of ex-Governor Henry Hoyt, died here Tuesday morning of paralysis, aged 51.

Cogswell Renominated.

SALEM, Mass., Oct. 1.—The Republicans of the Seventh district today renominated Gen. William Cogswell for congress.

Lost His Money and His Suit.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 1.—The first case ever tried here under the civil rights has just terminated. In May last Charles Sheldon, a well to do colored citizen, visited Eugene Robinson's "floating palace" and demanded the best seat, for which he was charged $100, which he paid. After being in his seat for a few moments he left, and sued Robinson for the amount of his ticket and damages for $100. After five days' trial the case terminated in favor of Robinson.

Want to Shut the Mills Down.

FALL RIVER, Oct. 1.—An effort is being made by local manufacturers to induce the Rhode Island mill men to join the combination to stop one week in October, but so far the attempt has not been successful. The Knights, who are the leading manufacturers of Rhode Island, are quoted as saying that, if the Fall River mills would agree to shut down for two weeks, they would guarantee that the Rhode Island factories would follow suit.

As True as Preaching.

The following was handed us this morning, by a prominent resident of Bellefonte, who requested its publication. We heartily second every word it contains and moreover call on the proper authorities to try and remedy the evil,

"I think it is about time the moral citizens of Bellefonte protest against the open lewdness on our streets and at the railroad passenger depot. There is a certain class of young women and so called young gents, known as the "dirty dozen," who nightly parade our streets. It is almost impossible for a decent woman to go on the streets after dark without having her ears shocked with awful profanity and worse vulgarity. Some people even dread to entertain company in their front rooms for fear of the language that occasionally reaches them from the outside.

"A little legal correction from the Assistant Burgess, properly applied, might bring some of these young girls on our streets, who are fast going to the bad, to a realization of their errors and start them in another direction.

"The evil seems to be growing worse and the town ought to be more effectively policed, particularly about the depot, until it is broken up. The reform of the few, as well as the protection and comfort of the many who are refined and decent, calls for it. The names of all the parties are known and if their carryings on are not stopped they will be published." *

—Samuel Wirts, of Houserville wishes to inform the public that he is prepared to weave all kinds of cotton and woolen carpets at prices lower than the lowest. He can also furnish carpet chain and filling at reasonable prices. He does work on short notice and guarantees it to give satisfaction Give him a call. aug 7-2m

Put on the Brakes.

If you find you are going down hill in point of health. Failing strength, impaired digestion and assimilation are the marks of decline. Check these and other indications of premature decay with the grand vitalizer and restraining tonic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Beginning at the fountain head, the stomach, the Bitters remedies its inefficiency, corrects its errors, and sets it vigorously at work. The digestive organ is thus enabled to thoroughly separate from the food its nutritive principles, which the blood assimilating, is enriched. Thus is the system nourished, and being nourished, strengthened, and abnormal waste of its tissues stayed. Appetite, the power to rest well, a regular habit are also reestablished, and the various functions move once more in their natural and healthful groove. The Bitters, moreover, is a specific cure for and preventive of malarial complaints, rheumatism, biliousness and kidney troubles. tf.

Saved My Child's Life.

J S Weaver, Secretary Iron Steamboat Company, New York, says: I wish to say to the public that I had a child about four years of age, lying at the point of death with summer complaint (diarrhoea), the doctor and all of us having given up hope. The doctor however, advised us to get some of Speer's Port Wine, and give her a little at a time—very little, but often. As a last resort we did so, and I say that Speer's Port Wine saved her life. She is my only child. I had never seen Mr. Speer, but with tears of joy I went and told him that his wine had saved he life of my only child.

—James Reilly, as "The Broom Maker of Carlsbad," played to a crowded house last evening. The audience was entirely captivated by the performance, and frequently gave hearty applause. The little children were especially well received, and their return to the city will insure an appreciative audience.—Altoono Times of this morning.

It Is All a Mistake.

We understand that about thirty cases of typhoid fever exist at Snow Shoe. One of our physicians has been called into requisition, from whom we learn that the cases thus far have mostly proven of a mild type.—Philipsburg Journal.

The above statement is a big mistake. There are a few cases of the fever on the mountain top, but not near so many as he above item would signify.

—The voters of Pennsylvania intend to consult their own interest this fall by voting for the man who will work to their interest and that man is the republican candidate, Senator G. W. Delamater. He will favor a reduction and better equalization of the present tax law. Pattison, the democrat nominee, will not. He has said so on several occasions. Farmers, which will you vote for?

What is the Use.

Of buying worthless medicines, and spending money on quack doctors whose only idea is to gull the public. Is it not better to buy reliable medicine like Sulphur Bitters? I think so, as they cured me of Catarrh after suffering three years.—E P Clark, Manchester.

Lead Poison Cured.

I am a painter by trade. Three years ago I had a bad case of Lead Poison, caused by using rubber paint I was cured in a short time by S S S. The medicine drove the poison out through the pores of the skin. When I first commenced taking S S S my system was so saturated with poison that my underclothes were colored by the paint being worked out by the medicine through the pores of my skin. I was cured entirely by S S S. I took nothing else, and have had no return since.

The Far Reaching Fassett Committee.

New York, Oct. 1.—The Fassett senate committee Tuesday decided to resume the investigation of the city departments on Monday next. The board of excise will most probably be the first department taken up. Before adjourning the committee adopted a resolution relative to obtaining the attendance before them of the mayors of the cities of Amsterdam, Dunkirk, Jamestown, Oswego, Rochester, Utica and Watertown to answer the questions propounded by the committee in January last, and which questions the mayors of the other thirty-two cities have answered.

And Murphy Is the Favorite.

Boston, Oct. 1.—Preliminaries have been arranged for a fight between Johnnie Murphy and George Dixon at the Gladstone Athletic club, Providence, Oct. 23, instead of the Puritan club, New York, as originally intended. The club offers a purse of $1,700, and the backers of the two men have each bet $1,000 on the result, the $1,000 a side stake money having been withdrawn. Murphy is the favorite at $100 to $75.

Vegetable Courtship.

A potato went out on a mash,
And sought an onion bed;
'That's pie for me,' observed the squash,
And all the beets turned red;
'Go away,' the onion weeping cried,
'Your love I cannot be:
The pumpkin is your lawful bride,
You cantaloupe with me.'

But onward still the tuber came,
And laid down at her feet;
'You cauliflower by any name
And it will smell as wheat;
And I, too, as an early rose,
And you I've come to see,
So don't turnip your lovely nose,
But spinach at with me.'

'Ah, spare me a cress,' the tuber prayed
'My cherry-ished bride you'll be;
You are the only weeping maid
That's current now with me.'
And as the wily tuber spoke
He grasped the bashful prize,
And giving her an artichoke,
Devoured her with his eyes.

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years, ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says:

Toledo, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F J Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours truly

A Brawny Bargee at the Helm.

To-day it is raining in torrents. He knows by experience the value of a "Fish Brand Slicker." It is his sole article of dress, and to him worth drawers, shirt, coat, vest, and pants. He'll tell you tales by the hour of storms lasting days and nights when that "Slicker" made up the whole difference between comfort and misery; and all for a mere trifle from his week's pay. Why don't you buy one for yourself? To realize how little it costs, think how long it lasts. It will outwear four suits of clothes. Better get one to-day, before you forget it. A day's delay may cause a month of sickness, and cost a hundred times the price of a Slicker. Beware of worthless imitations, every garment stamped with the "Fish Brand" Trade Mark. Don't accept any inferior coat when you can have the "Fish Brand Slicker" delivered without extra cost. Particulars and illustrated catalogue free.

A Signed Prayer.

Jack Horner—not the one connected in history with a big plum; this one was, on the contrary, something of a pickle—Jack had some peculiarities which were rather striking in a little boy, as suggesting originality in his way of looking at things; but one hopes he didn't carry all of them on into his big boyhood; for instance, his way of saying his prayers, which would certainly seem irreverent to most people. In reality it was just a way in which Jack's individuality showed itself. He would begin abruptly, "God!" and end with, "Yours truly, Jack Horner." Jack's defense when rather gravely remonstrated with, was that "so many little boys and girls were saying their prayers about that time, that it must be impossible for God to know which was his.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

Heart-burn

Sour Stomach

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." Again it affords us much pleasure to be able to record the fact that the Pittsburg Exposition opened its doors promptly as advertised. The many things to be seen are worthy of much of our space, but we will dwell only on one exhibit, the only one of its kind at the great show. Well may we say it is worthy of comment. We refer with pride to the display of Mr Max Klein, the wholesale liquor merchant. There you will find a complete distillery in full operation. His Silver Age Rye stands on a pyramid high enough to overlook all other displays; the bbs, and cases show at once the extent of his trades, conveying the impression that he ships to all parts of the country. His Pennsylvania Rye Whiskies, his imported and domestic wines, brandies and cordials are prominent features. No other liquor house in the country would dare to compete with him in making a display, and no other house in his line can or will sell goods as pure and at such reasonable prices. You can leave orders at his stand or apply to him direct for his complete catalogue and price list. Such a house should receive the custom of all who wish fair treatment and to Max Klein 82, Federal St., Allegheny, Pa., we can recommend you.

The Broom Maker of Carlsbad.

Two large and delighted audiences welcomed the talanted, singing, German dialect comedian, Mr. James Reilly, and his really good company back to the Park theatre yesterday afternoon and last night. They presented an excellent comedy drama, "The Broom-maker of Carlsbad." The piece is full of interest and it is interspersed with some fine songs by Mr. Reilly and Miss May Templeton. The piece as a whole was enjoyable, and the company preeshuting was up to the standard. Those who were there were treated to one of the neatest little plays presented this season. Mr. Reilly as Johann, the broom-maker, was the leading character, and his impersonation of the German character, was applauded. Miss May Templeton as Gretchen and Miss Louise Remming as Mrs. Vanderburgh, were good, but next to Mr. Reilly himself, little Hans and Eita were the favorites with the audience.—Dayton News, March 7, 1890.

HIGHER EDUCATION FOR THE MASSES.

For the masses, education is not professional, and cannot be made so; it is life-nurture, and should evolve a more robust mental life for all. There is no good reason why the ministrations of school should be cut off from any at the age of fifteen or twenty years; no good reason why they should not be continued as long as the mind continues to feed. If we were as sensitive to the mind's needs as to the body's, this point would need no argument. The stomach enforces its natural demands by sanctions which no one cares to dispute. As long as it lives, it demands the ministrations of a cook and will have them; but because the mind does not gnaw, and ache, and twist itself up with pain when stuffed or starved, it is school stuffed for ten years more or less and school-starved for the remainder of life. When the stuffing is on it is absolute, and when it is cut off the starvation is equally so, and thus, before mental life has fairly begun in best earnest, the last examination has been passed, and all systematic feeding is suddenly cut off thereafter the aspirant may browse along the highways, like an ownerless animal. Intellectual orders should be as universal on the plateaus of life as on its upward slopes. In all grades of childhood there should be an equitable division of opportunities for school and play, while for youth, and reaching as far into maturity as may be desired, systematic study, with the aid of instructors, should be made coexistent and move abreast with industrial pursuit, rather than tandem as at present.

In carrying out this idea, a new type of College or university must arise for the people. It may be based on public or private foundations, or on both. Is should embody the best grades of ability, it should be clothed with the highest dignities of culture, and it should reach to the summits of education; but its courses, instead of covering four or six years, should be made extensible to ten or twenty years, or a lifetime, according to individual time or opportunity. The exclusive mid day session or mid day lectures in such an institution would necessarily be inadmissible. The hours of instruction and study must be taken from those not demanded for business or toil. The general diploma must be made attainable in parts, grade by grade and branch by branch, instead of a whole as now.

The accent may be long, but the steps should be made easy, and every step upward marked by official recognition. Small acquisitions must be provided for in the scheme, and duly accredited. His university grade book should be as well adapted to the possibilities of the modest aspirant as is his savings-bank account, and made a twin with it. Where would be the thrift of the country, its business solidity, and the respectability of its millions, if there were no bank certificates for less than a thousand dollars? But there are no letters of credit in education which do not cost double that sum in time or money. Our banking system, moreover rates everybody; those who have not bank accounts, by the absence of them, with as much certrinty as those who have by dimensions of them. A society university open to all would just as truly rate each individual in an intellectual sense, and promote bette standards of social distinctions.—From "University Extensions," by Prof. Skid more in October LIPPENCOTT'S.

Anecdote of Tennyson.

"Lord Tennyson is not often here, is he?" said the inquisitive scribe of an old gentleman who took the tickets at the flower show, and who occasionally waits at Faringford House where the poets receive company.

"No, he doesn't often come here in the season. People follow him so."

What sort of a looking person is his lordship?

Lordship! We don't often call him a lord about here. Wasn't made one mor'n three or four months ago. We call'm Mister Tennyson. A nice old gent he is, only'e ain't no better clothed than a scarecrow. Wears an old soft felt hat dragged down to his nose (which is a long'un), and has a long moustarsh and beard, with an old coat as is green with age.

Is he liked in the neighborhood?

Yes he's a kind old gent, and we all likes him hereabouts.

I suppose you are rather proud of having a great poet in the locality?

The old man seemed to think the honor not such a tremendous one as it might be.

Forced to Leave Home.

Over 60 people were forced to leave their homes yesterday to call at their druggist's for a free trial package of Lane's Family Medicine. If your blood is bad, your liver and kidneys out of order, if you are constipated and have headache and an unsightly complexion, don't fail to call on any druggist to day for a free sample of this good remedy. The ladies praise it. Everyone likes it. Large-size packages 50 cents.

A STAND OFF.

A couple of practical jokers, living at a big up-town hotel, bought a terrapin while walking through the market the other day, and slipped it into the bed of a fresh arrival who had just registered. They watched that night until they saw the newcomer retire to bed. In about ten minutes a white-robed figure began shouting down the elevator shaft for the landlord. When the crowd got upstairs the victim conducted the landlord to the bed and turned down the clothes.

"Mr. Hotel-keeper," said the stranger, solemnly, pointing to the terrapin, "I'm from New Jersey, and I can stand most anything, but either that bug or me has got to take another room."—San Francisco Post.

Will Detect any Woman's Age.

Women will dread to hear that at the Academy of Medicine in Paris on Saturday a New York Specialist presented an optometer which will detect any woman's age at quick notice. As soon as any one tells the number of dominoes he or she sees distinctly his or her age is revealed beyond dispute

Overfeeding Horses.

One prolific cause of thin, weak horses in hot weather is overfeeding. The fattest and finest looking team of draft horses in my neighborhood were fed only three quarts of oats three times each day during last summer, and then not spared in the harness. Growing horses would probably do well on such light feeding as the above.

POSTAL MATTERS.

Carelessness Causes a Vast Amount of Trouble, and Much Loss.

The postal system of the United States is a wonderful thing when a careful consideration of it is made. When it is realized that a letter, properly sealed, stamped and directed, can be sent to any part of our great country, and no one know the contents, during the transmission, save the writer, for the small sum of two cents, we are apt to arrive at the conclusion that the system over which Postmaster General Wanamaker presides, with thousands of assistants, is a well devised and well executed scheme for sending information to all parts of the land, as well as to other countries far from the one in which we live. As perfect as the postal system would seem to be, however, much annoyance to the authorities and great loss to senders of letters is brought about by carelessness in stamping and addressing letters. In our own post office sealed letters are often dropped without either address or stamp. Sometimes the name of the person for whom the letter is intended appears on the letter, but not the city or town in which he lives. Very frequently a postal card is written and dropped into the boxes without any name or address thereon. When you go to the post office with a letter, postal card or package, for transmission through the mails, see to it that they are properly stamped, and the name and address of the person to whom it is sent, plainly written. A little care in these matters would bring about a reform which postmasters and other postal attaches have long looked for. In looking over a circular issued from the dead letter office, Washington, D. C., we find some statistics which may be of interest to our readers.

Over 6,000,000 pieces of mail matter are sent annually to the dead letter office by reason of incorrect, ineligible, or deficient address, insufficient postage, insecure inclosing whereby matter mailed becomes separated from the envelope or wrapper, or the failure to be called for or delivered to the person addressed. This is a daily average of over 20,000 pieces.

Of the unclaimed and undelivered mail matter received at the dead letter office during the past fiscal year, 451,000 were letters misdirected, or only partially addressed—that is, not addressed to a post office, or, addressed to a post office without the state being given, or, addressed to a postoffice not in the state named, etc., etc. No less than 24,000 were entirely blank, bearing no address whatever; 98,000 were letters to domestic addresses, "held for postage," together with letters etc., addressed to Canada and Mexico, matter to these countries being unmailable except upon full prepayment of postage 165,000 were letters mainly addressed to persons in care of hotels, the guests to whom they were addressed having departed without leaving their addresses; 42,000 were letters to fictitious addresses, and principally correspondence relating to what is known as "green goods" or "saw dust" swindlers, etc., many of them containing money with orders for the purchase of these fraudulent goods; 80,000 were parcels of merchandise, books, clothing, needlework, jewelry, etc., many of which were misdirected, while others were without wrapper, having been insecurely inclosed, and others from which the address had become separated and lost. A large proportion were those upon which the required amount of postage to entitle them to transmission through the mails had not been prepaid, insufficient payment being due to improper inclosing, whereby a higher rate of postage was required; 28,000 contained money amounting in all to $48,642; 4,900 had inclosures of postal notes in small sums under $5, aggregating $5,300; 27,000 were found to contain drafts, checks, notes, commercial paper, etc., in the sum of $1,471,871, while 48,000 contained paid and canceled obligations, receipts evidencing payments of money, deed, mortgages, general miscellaneous papers, etc.; 42,000 contained photographs; 1,000 contained articles forbidden to be transmitted through the mails; 11,000, upon being opened, were found to contain lottery tickets, which, under the terms of the law, are declared unmailable; 162,000 contained postage stamps; 531,000 were letters, and 41,000 parcels of printed matter, samples, etc., which had been mailed in foreign countries to postoffices within the United States, and failing of delivery, were sent to the dead letter office; 205,000 were tellers, and 47,000 were parcels, books, etc., which had been mailed within the United States, addressed to foreign countries. Over 5,800,000 of the letters received at the dead letter office contained no inclosure of obvious value, although doubtless many of them were quite as valuable and important to both sender and addressee as thousands of other letters containing money, checks, stamps, etc.

THE PASSION PLAY.

Philadelphia Times.

Rev. Dr. George D. Baker, who recently returned from Europe, lectured last evening to a large audience in the First Presbyterian church on "The Passion Play," at Oberammergau. He prefaced his discourse by a general review of his tour through Europe. For days before the product on of the play the roads that lead to the town where it is to take place are crowded with pedestrians, many of whom have walked hundreds of miles. The night before its production the houses and tents which have been temporarily erected for the occasion are uncomfortably crowded.

At 5 o'clock in the morning a signal gun is fired, which awakens the whole town, as a token that the day of the Passion play is at hand. The Roman Catholic churches are crowded at the 6 o'clock Masses. It is necessary to have the seats engaged beforehand and to take possession of them before the hour of the commencement of the play.

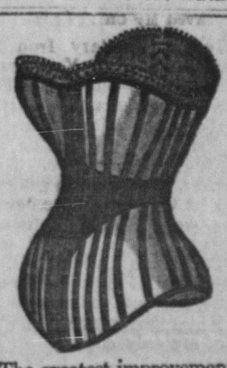
At 8 o'clock another great gun is fired, which is a signal that the play is about to begin. The large auditorium, which holds 5,000 persons, is crowded. The orchestra plays and the large company taking part in the play appears. "I was carried insensible during the whole of the performance." He then described the theatre, sceneries and the costumes worn by those who took part, in the play, "which much resembled," he said, "those worn in the days of the crucifixion."

The play, he said, represented eighteen scenes, beginning with entry into Jerusalem. He then described the various scenes and the appearances of Christ, the apostles, Pilate Judas, etc. In beautiful language he depicted the figures of Christ and the thieves. "The contrast between them," he said, "was as great as that between heaven and hell."

At the crucifixion scene a perfect still ness reigned and a solemn silence pervaded the whole hall. "For twenty minutes those m n hung upon the cross and it is surprising how they could stand it physically." A transformation came over them and their faces seemed to gradually grow pale.

The most pathetic scene of all was that of taking Christ down from the cross. At this time the whole audience were in tears. Strong men wept like little children. I was blind to everything that followed this. From 8 o'clock in the morning until 5.30 in the afternoon the audience were kept in wrapt amazement and attention.

Dr. Baker was under the impression that there was something more than natural about the play. "A great English critic who was sent purposely to criticise it," he said, "could never imagine that those who took part in it were actors. It had a visible effect on the most skeptical persons. Yet all who took part in the play were humble peasants. The man who took the part of Christ was a wood carver. Yet I believe that if the best actors in the world were brought together they never could produce this play with such effect. The reason is that these people do it through a pure religious spirit. The play," he said, "originated in 1630, when a plague-stricken district in Germany made a vow that if God would remove the calamity they would give a public exhibition of the passion of Christ every tenth year."



The greatest improvement in Corsets during the past twenty years is the use of Coraline in the place of horn or whalebone. It is used in all of Dr. Warner's Corsets and in no others.

The advantages of Coraline over horn or whalebone are that it does not become set like whalebone, and it is more flexible and more durable.

Dr. Warner's Coraline Corsets are made in twenty-four different styles, fitting every variety of figures—thin, medium, stout, long waists and short waists.

Sold everywhere.

It is his duty—morally, if not legally—to pay the money out of his own pocket. It is a debt of honor due to the state, to his party and to his own sense of manhood, and such a debt he should feel it a privilege to discharge with the least possible delay."

OCTOBER'S WEATHER.

WHAT REV. DR. HICKS HAS TO SAY ABOUT THE METEOROLOGICAL OUTLOOK.

Rev. Irl R. Hicks, in the Word and Works, gives the following weather forecasts for October:—

October should open with cool, bright weather prevailing in most parts of the country. Heavy frosts with some sharp freezing will be a most natural result during the nights tiding us from September into October. On the 2d and 3d a sharp and sudden rise in temperature, followed by storminess, may be looked for, and by the time the higher temperature and storms touch the East another blast from the north and west will have advanced past the middle of the continent.

About the 7th it will begin to turn quite warm, with soft skies and southerly currents, which condition will grow until storms of marked energy show themselves on danger days—8th, 9th and 10th. Meteorological laws will compel a period of three to four days of sharp freezing and frost after these storms, which condition will break down progressively from west to east on and next to the 14th and 15th. Warm, southerly winds, with reactionary storms will be the result—followed again by the regular cold wave.

As we approach the 20th, eyes trained to meteorological changes will note the gathering elements of approaching storms Higher temperature, falling barometer, easterly to southerly winds—storms! The 20th, 21st, and 22d are the days in the period against which we would especially warn our readers. There is a noticeable tendency to storminess in the regions of the northern lakes about this time, and the approaching perturbation of Venus, together with other causes, will likely aggravate this tendency at this time into violent movements. The days following up to reactionary movements about the 26th and 27th ought to be crisp and cold, with freezing generally to northward.

A storm period in which Vulcan, Mercury, and Venus are directly concerned, begins about the last day of October. The month will go out with rising temperature and threatening indications, if not active storms, to the west.

There is a longer and harder Winter before us than last. Let us see. Meantime, what harm can come from careful preparation for a colder Winter and for a drier, hotter Summer to follow? "The prudent man foreseeth the evil and hideth himself, but the simple pass on and are punished."

Literary Note.

The New York Ledger for October 4 is a mine of interesting fact and fiction regarding the South, both the New South and the Old. It leads off with a brilliant character sketch of Henry W Grady, journalist, orator and patriot, written by Oliver Dyer, in which the effect on the New South of Grady's life-work is luminously explained. A crisp editorial on "The Marvelous Revival of Prosperity in the South" tells its own tale. The Old South is pictured in the opening installment of a Kentucky war story entitled "Reunited," the pen product of a distinguished Southern officer. In "For Isabel," Maurice Thompson gives a vignette of ante bellum life in Louisiana. James Parton tells the story of Cæsar Rodney of Delaware. An illustrated ballad by Thomas Dunn English and a story by Mrs. Amelia E Barr, are published in the same number.

That Senatorial Conference.

The Senatorial conference for this district, composing the counties of three C's—Centre, Clinton and Clearfield, which met in Tyrone on Wednesday has yet arrived at no choice for candidate. They worked hard on Wednesday afternoon and all day Thursday and finally adjourned until to-day. In all about forty ballots have been taken. Each county sticks to its own man but, we are glad to say, what outside sentiment there is seems to be in favor of Centre's man, Hon. P. Gray Meek. We would like to see our editorial neighbor get the nomination but at such times it is the longest pole that knocks the persimmons.

Candidates for Governor.

The Prohibition State Committee met in Harrisburg on Wednesday and substituted John D. Gill, of Greensburg, Westmoreland county, for Governor, in place of Charles Miller, of Vanango, who declined.

The Union Labor party in convention at Philadelphia on Wednesday nominated our own Theodore P. Rynder for Governor, with Justus Watkins, of Tioga county for Lieutenant Governor, and Henry K. Feller, of Blair county, for Secretary of Internal Affairs. The country may now be said to be safe.

Why Is It?

During the past fortnight there have been more cases of petty thieving done than was ever known before in ten times that length of time in this county. In addition to the pocket-picking that was done at Centre Hall, a man by the name of Henry Pennington is in jail for stealing an overcoat from Mr. Frank Montgomery. Daniel Keefe is charged with stealing $125 and is in jail awaiting trial; George Chambers is locked up awaiting trial for stealing $150 from Mrs. Nolan's trunk in Snow Shoe. Verily there is something wrong somewhere.

Attention, Comrades.

General W. G. Veazey, Commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, has issued the following letter to the members of that organization:

COMRADES:—The grand Army of the Republic was never in better condition than at the present time. Its strength and power are commensurate with its numbers, now nearly one half million comrades. But its mission is not for personal benefit to ourselves, but to enable us individually the better to do good to others who stood at our side in the shock of battle. There are far too many such not enrolled with us and therefore not within the reach of the full benefits of our order. They lose the advantage and inspiration of fraternal associations which the Post room, the only club house of the average veteran, affords. The relief fund of the Post is not sure to reach them in their distress. They do not go with us to visit the sick, to feed the hungry, or bury the dead comrade. Our badge, which Grant and Sheridan prized and Sherman wears, does not decorate their breasts as the insignia of honor for their valiant service.

No veteran joins the Grand Army of the Republic and enters into its work in the spirit of true comradeship, without being lifted to a loftier manhood and to the plane of better citizenship. We therefore fail in duty if we fail to do our utmost to bring all who offered their lives for flag and country within our organization. They all now know that such membership cannot infringe the free exercise of political inclination or religious faith.

The Commander-in-Chief, therefore appeals to Posts and comrades to bring upon our rolls all worthy veterans of the Union army and navy, who are not there already, and to let none be dropped therefrom for inability to pay the small dues incumbent upon membership.

He also solicits from Department Commanders and all comrades frank suggestions upon matters within administrative jurisdiction pertaining to the welfare of the order. By vigorous co-operation along all lines they are sure to be greatly advanced, and our countrymen will ever rise up to bless us for true devotion to "Fraternity, Charity and Loyalty," even as they hold us in honor for brave deeds on the battlefields of the Republic.

U. B. Church Conference.

The conference of the United Brethren church which was held at Scotdale, in Westmoreland county, Pa. has closed with prospects of a successful year. The sessions were marked for the unanimity of feeling with respect to progressive work.

Bishop J. Dickson, of Chambersburg presided, and there were present Dr. I. L Kephart, editor of the Religious Telescope and Dr. J A Funkhouser, senior professor of the academy, Dayton Ohio.

The reports from the circuits were generally good and very encouraging.

The next annual conference will be held at Huntinndon.

How to Take Care of the Brain.

The brain stands most abuse of any organ in the body. Its best tonic and stimulent is success. The worst and most depressing thing to it is failure. The most injurious effects come by using stimulents in early life. Young people should never use liquors, tea, or coffee. The latter two may do no harm but they are conducive of no good. They act mostly on the brain and injure its growth very materially. Abundance of sleep is necessary. Eight hours is not more than enough. Sleep is the time of relatively lowered expenditure and increased repair.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Congressional Nomination.

The democratic congressional conference of this district, which convened at Ridgway on Thursday nominated on the first ballot George F Krebs, a prominent attorney of Clarion. This is a little tough on handsome Jimmy Kerr who, it was conceeded all along, had a clear field for renomination. But something went wroug somewhere and now there is a probability of a raise in the Delamater majorities all along the line.

THE IRISH CORPORAL

A War Drama—A Strong Attraction.

From the Shenandoah Herald.

The visitors at the Theatre to night will be treated to a production of the new war comedy entitled "The Irish Corporal." The initial performance of this play was given at Bethlehem last week, and the Times of that city says it was a grand success. The famous Irish comedian, Tony Farrell, and the charming little actress, Jennie Leland, are at the head of the company organized by that veteran C. R. Gardner.

The first act opens on the scene of a New England farm, the homestead of Joel Osborne, who has a son, Lawrence, and a daughter, Annie. Jerry, an Irish lad, is one of the family, and Celia, his sweetheart is a servant on the farm. The dialogue concerns the outbreak of the rebellion and Lawrence becomes the captain of the company raised in the neighborhood. He is accompanied by Jerry, who becomes a corporal, and Bill Swansey, a typical New England farmer. Leonard Warrington, a southern gentleman, in love with Annie; goes to his home to fight for the cause of the south, and at his home the scene of the second act is laid. Lawrence's company is stationed near by and takes possession of the house and establishes an arsenal He falls in love with Warrington's sister, but is repulsed. Annie and Celia appear on the scene, having gone south to nurse the wounded, but were arrested as spies and taken to Warrington, who orders their release. Jerry is captured, but escapes by Celia's aid.

Warrington leaves the house in disguise, but is captured, recognized and sentenced to be shot. His sister appeals to Lawrence to save him, but the latter refuses to disobey the orders of his superior officers. Annie disguised as a sentry aids in his escape, during which she receives a wound, and is placed in a guard house, awaiting trial. Warrington reappears as a Union soldier and convinces Jerry that he needs rest, volunteering to take his place at guard duty. Annie is released from the guard house and she and Warrington escape.

In the last act Jerry and his wife Celia are at home in New York and the former has just been elected as an alderman. Lawrence is unhappy because of his supposed failure to gain the love of the southern beauty, but later they meet and all is forgiven. Leonard married Annie and there is a happy denouement. The play is an excellent combination of pathos and comedy, and with a few minor alterations will become a figure on the dramatic boards.

—James Reilly, the natural German comedian and vocalist will appear at the Opera house for one week commencing ——. Mr. Reilly comes highly recommended by the press, and has been meeting with success in his new and original comedy drama in four acts, written for him by Isador Witmark and F. B. Hawkins. The opening act is laid at the great German watering place of Carlsbad. He is supported by a select company, including the two accomplished children Master Robbie and Little Edna, new and elegant scenery, by Schaeffer and Maeder, of Niblo's theatre and everything that time and money could do has been done to make the play a success.

Mr. Reilly will sing a number of new and original songs, including the celebrated "Broom Song," "Darling Sister Do Not Weep," "Lover Call," duet with yode; "Hush, Baby Sleep," (a novel lullaby.) "Think of Your Mother at Home, Boy," and a number of others. —Cincinnati Enquirer, Dec. 10, 1889.

Hard to Beat.

An author's masterpice; a rollicking star; a clever soubrette, and a strong company of players, is indeed a difficult combination to beat. The amusement public always consider it so, and insist that it is hard to find. However, they will have the chance to view such a one when Tony Farrell comes to town next Monday evening, with "The Irish Corporal," a comedy by the late Elliott Barnes, full of humorous situations, striking climaxes and strong scenes. The supporting company is one of the strongest ever engaged to support a star and is led by that ever original and taking soubrette, Miss Jennie Leland. Don't fail to witness this wonderful play. Tickets now on sale at Parrish's drug store.

The Nationalists' Programme.

Edward Bellamy explains in the October number of the Forum how the Nationalist would start about shaping society to bring finally the state of things described in "Looking Backward." He would not work any violent revolution, but he would at once put the railroads, the telegraph, gas works, water works, the coal mines, and such general means of public service under State control; and these changes, he thinks, would lead naturally and gradually to the complete nationalization of industry. He explains in as great detail as possible the practical workings of State control as applied to these industries.

WHO WILL GET THE PUMPKIN?

Who is the Most Popular Member of the Borough Council?

Believing that there is room in Bellefonte to vote on the popularity of some one the NEWS has determined to offer as a reward the largest pumpkin to be found in Centre county to the most popular member of the borough council—clerk included—their popularity to be tested by ballot. For this reason we propose to establish a voting contest to last but two weeks and commencing with to-day. Therefore we ask all citizens of Bellefonte to enter the race and fill out the following ballot and either send or bring to this office. Every ballot counts one no difference by whom voted or how many one man votes. Fill in the name of your preference and the ward in which he lives, sign your own name and then forward to this office where a proper tally will be kept until Friday evening, October 10th, when the contest will close, the votes be counted and the result printed in Saturday's NEWS. How Kerr Took His Defeat.

The Philadelphia Press says State Chairman Kerr received a dispatch at the Democratic Headquarters yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock. The Democratic Chairman expected nothing until he opened it. When he read it his face blanched like marble and his hand shook like a leaf. His agitation was so marked that the clerks in the room where he stood noticed it. Chairman Kerr read and re-read the dispatch before he seemed to realize its real meaning. Then, after going over it several times, he hastily withdrew to his private room and sat down.

WHAT IS SAID IN WASHINGTON.

A dispatch from Washington says Kerr's defeat is regarded by Republican members of the Pennsylvania delegation as the most important happening that has yet occurred in the campaign, and it is the concensus of opinion of the Pennsylvania delegation, Democrats and Republicans alike, that the action of the conference in turning down Mr. Kerr will be worth many thonsands of votes to the Republican candidate for Governor.

the result is a collision, whether "coming thro' the rye," or not. Life is full of collisions. We are constantly colliding with somebody or something. If it isn't with our neighbors it is with some dread diseases that "knocks us off the track" and perhaps disables us for life. Women especially it seems, have to bear the brunt of more collisions and afflictions than mankind. ELIXIR OF LIFE AND HEALTH.

is one that promotes digestion, improves the appetite, cleanses the liver, purifies the blood, and stimulates brain and nerves without injurious reaction, and one that may be taken alike by adult or infant. Profane compounds, made of vile rum or bad whiskey, sweetened and flavored, under the titles of bitters, tonics, &c, produce effects far worse than the disease for which they are taken.

Vinegar Bitters is a pure tonic, a nervine without being narcotic, a purifier without poison, a liver tonic without purging, and above all, a life-giving stimulant without alcohol. The only medicine with such powers in the world.

A GENUINE TEMPERANCE BEVERAGE, far surpassing alcohol in any shape as a tonic it might be called

since it stimulates, invigorates and regulates digestion, nutrition, secretion, excretion, respiration, and all the functions whereby life is maintained—we literally take in vitality in spoonfuls.

It is too much to assert that the equal of Vinegar Bitters does not exist, an no counterpart or compound with similar virtues has ever been known

CALIFORNIA,
if remarkable for nothing else, would be immortalized by the production of the medicinal fruits, roots and herbs of which this Bitters is composed. Many of them used by the Indians and the medical profession in the treatment of chills and fevers, rheumatism, catarrh, consumption, neuralgia, headaches, liver complaint, kidney disease, jaundice, gout, piles, boils, skin diseases, &c., &c., too numerous to mention, but easily understood when the action of the Bitters on the vital functions is remembered. The discovery was partly accidental but the present

PERFECT BITTERS IS THE RESULT OF SCIENCE.

Millions of sufferers have gratefully and gladly endorsed, during the past quarter of a century the wonderful success of this

PHENOMENAL TONIC OF THE WORLD.

In order to meet every probable demand, two formulas of the same ingredients are now put up.

THE OLD STYLE IS STRONGER, SLIGHTLY BITTER, AND MORE CATHARTIC.

THE NEW STYLE, PLEASANT TO THE TASTE, AND EXPRESSLY ADAPTED TO DELICATE WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

REMEMBER,
There is no disease of low vitality, debility of functions, or nervous prostration for which.

VINEGAR BITTERS IS NOT CURATIVE, and its singular power over the lower organisms renders it the implacable foe of.

THE DEADLY MICROBE AND OMNIPRESENT BACTERIA in malarial diseases, cholera, consumption, internal diseases, &c., and so great is its power as a germicide that it is an

UNEQUALLED VERMIFUGE.

A book could be written of its virtues, and another of testimonials, but it is only necessary to remember its general action upon the liver, blood, brain and nerves, to realize its use in a majority of the ills that flesh is heir to, and that no family should ever be without a bottle of

—If the ladies of the W. C. T. U. succeed in getting up a star course of lectures for this season they must not omit to put Russell H. Conwell on their list, as he will draw as large a house as anything they can bring here,

—The funeral of Mrs. John Curtin occurred on Sunday. Rev. W. A. Houck officiated and interment was made at the Eagle cemetery near Curtin's works. The following gentlemen acted as pall-bearers: Messrs. John P. Harris, F. W. Crider, E. M. Blanchard, John T. Johnston, Frank McCoy and John Potter.

—On Wednesday Lock Haven will have a big day. First there will be a regular railroad circus and menagerie during the afternoon and evening and then in the evening there will be a big Republican mass meeting at which will be candidates Delamater, Waters and Stewart, General Hastings and other prominent men. This will be a good bit for as slow a town as Lock Haven is to have all in one day.

HE KNOWS THEM ALL.

A Few Lines from a Democrat Who Knows Which Way to Vote.

Editor Daily News and Republican;

DEAR SIR:—I have studied for some time whether to write to you or not. Not because I did not think it was my duty to write and let you Bellefonters, as well as your many readers, know how things stood on this side, but because it seemed to me that there was really no necessity for so doing as I am of the opinion the republican ticket will be elected this fall anyway. Nevertheless, you will get my vote, and not only mine, but scores of my neighbor democrats' votes, to help put in office men who represent the party who has so successfully managed the county's affairs during the past three years, the assertions of the democratic press to the contrary, notwithstanding.

In the first place we want Wolfe for Sheriff. My acquaintance with Wolfe in the past leads me to openly say that there is not another man in Centre county who would make a better officer than just he. As to the charges of drunkenness preferred against him by the democratic papers, I can unequivocally brand the whole thing as an infamous lie, and do so on authority and I defy proof to the contray. As to Ishler, he is all right as a farmer but Centre county has no use for him in the Sheriff's office. If you wan't to know why go and inquire of some of his neighbors and you can easily find out.

But the most amusing thing to us Penns Valley democrats is the way that the democratic press is booming Morrison for recorder. Why that is the most absurd, as well as ridicalous, thing heard of. Dr. Harter will go across the mountain, from this strong democratic valley, with a majority to his credit, and if his own party stands by him he will have a majority in the county of not less than 500. This is not merely idle talk but facts that will be substantiated at the polls. If the democratic papers want to know how true this is leave them ask Mr. Morrison how he got along when he taught school in this valley; and then ask him how he conducted his campaign on this side three years ago? Let him take warning; there are men of his own political faith who are now using the very same methods to defeat him that he himself used three years ago to secure his election.

And then there is Gramley, the farmer who the democrats have taken up for treasurer. If he isn't a badly whipped man at the polls in November there never was or never will be one. How he ever come to get the nomination is a mystery unless it was secured in some such way as Ishler's was. But his nomination is not his election and if Ed. Tyson isn't Centre's next treasurer you can put me down as a regular old blow head.

I have already taken up too much of your valuable space or I would write you at length about the whole ticket but I will just here say that as for Holt and McCormick we have nothing for them and that we intend to support both Strehm and Kunes for commissioners while we will see that the tail end of the ticket don't stick for a matter of a few hundred votes. But enough for this time and maybe in a few weeks you may again hear from a

PENNSVALLEY DEMOCRAT.

A Struggle for Maverick.

The above is the title of a dramatic story in three parts, by that prince of good writers, James Franklin Fitts, and published by Street and Smith, 31 Rose street, New York. It is known as No. 22 in their "Sea and Shore series." In "The Struggle for Maverick" Mr. Fitts fully sustains his national reputation as a celebrated writer of fiction. The story is located on the Hudson, and covers a period of two score years beginning with 1820. It is wonderfully fascinating and intensely interesting. Sent free to any address on receipt of price—25 cents.

We Are Not Taking Sides.

So far the only one of our adjoining county exchanges which has dared to say anything about the Clan-na-Gael letter received by us was the Bellefonte Republican. Our own county papers are as dumb as oysters.—Houtzdale Observer,

So far as the war that our Houtzdale contemporary is waging between the Roman Catholic and the Protestant church is concerned we have nothing to say. It is not our province to make a church paper out of the Republican, or to poise a judge advocate general as to the righteousness of one or both of the churches. The difference between Christians in either the Roman Catholic or Protestant church is simply one of creed; but what is to be deplored, in our estimation, is the presumption of foreign nationalities under the guise of the Christian church, seeking to overthrow, or at least, revolutionize, this government of ours.

So far as our criticism on the letter referred to was concerned it was printed first as an item of news and again because we think that nothing should be excluded from the columns of the public press that is in any way condemnatory of a sect or society that seeks to shelter itself under the protecting wing of a church solely for the better perpetration of some of the most daring crimes and greatest wrongs against civilized society that has ever been practiced in this or ancient times. Such a society is what we believe the Clan-na-Gael to be, and the sooner they are brought to a realization of the fact that this is America—free America, if you please—the land for which our forefathers fought, bled and died, and that we, as Americans, would again fight to continue our blessed and greatest government on the earth, the sooner will all class, governmental and international distinctions between the Roman Catholic and the Protestant churches be wiped out, and the difference will only be one of creed same as the difference existing between the various branches of the Protestant church.

We Observe That

Chilly winter fast approacheth.

There was more frost this than on Sunday morning.

That all the public schools are very well attended.

That house cleaning time is here and ad eqrudent housekeeper is busy.

That the time is now at hand to fire up the double heater and consume coal at $5.20 per ton.

That when a candidate tells you that he's not after votes then is you're time for disappearing or the next minute he will ask for your vote.

—We call the attention of our readers to the communication from a Penns Valley democrat published elsewhere in this paper. It is very evident that the writer is a man that is no "dummy" by any means, and further that he is acquainted with the methods used three years ago by some of the candidates to secure their election and the way some of the nominations were made this year. His article at least contains food for reflection.

—The ladies of the Presbyterian church to the number of seventy-five or a hundred, met at the church on Thursday evening to hear Mrs Orbison, of Bellefonte, speak on the subject of Missions. Her address was very much enjoyed by her audience and the strength of the Missionary Society in Philipsburg should be greatly increased by this effort.—Philipsburg Ledger.

—The "Broom-maker" is a play that has created quite a sensation in the large cities when played there. And James Reilly, who is the life of the play, is encored again and again. If you want to see the one and only Reilly you must go to the opera house on Friday night.

REDEEMED.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY REDEEMS ITS PLEDGES BY PASSING THE TARIFF BILL.

The Republican Party, in congress assembled, has redeemed its pledges to the people of the whole country to pass a tariff bill founded strictly upon the principles of protection for the benefit of our industries, the laboring classes and to insure the prosperity and welfare of the nation.

The party has redeemed its promises and assurances made, in national convention assembled, to all its voters. And this too despite the fact that two Senators, Plumb, of Kansas, and Paddock, of Nebraska, elected as Republicans, have hindered at every step and voted against the measure at the close, this great work of Congress.

The republicans of the nation will now call upon Kansas and Nebraska to send to the Senate men who can comprehend the principles of government in distinction from the cheap meanness of protection simply for special and local gain and for political aggrandizement.

At the Opera House.

Owing to our absence on Tuesday there was, unintentionally, no notice made of the very good play rendered by the Irish Corporal on Monday night. The house was crowded—it being by far the largest audience that has assembled in the new opera house—and, to judge from the amount of applause and enthusiasm displayed, we would unhesitatingly pronounce the play a grand success. Tony Farrell walked right into popular favor while his sweetheart at once captivated and charmed the entire audience. Besides this every member of the company was an artist in his or her own right. Manager Garman cannot secure the return of the "Irish Corporal" too soon.

The next play at the opera house will be the "Broom-maker." This occurrs on Friday night and will be the last engagement for two weeks. "The Broom-maker" is a great play and you don't want to miss it. Read what the Philadelphia Call has to say about it:

Mr. Reilly's impersonation of the leading character—that of Johan—has many distinct points of merit. His singing is one of the chief features. He has a voice of peculiar timbre—very penetrating, of good volume, and not without sympathetic quality. Although the character of Johann is done in German dialect, it is distinctly remindful of W. J. Scanlon, and Mr. Reilly's work is equa to that of Mr. Scanlon. In the disguise of Widow McFay, Mr. Reilly is amusing rather than interesting. This character is introduced chiefly to afford the actor an opportunity to exploit his versatility.

Frand Marion presents a quaint, though unassuming character study as Jerry Barry. It has numerous touches of nature, is commendable in its freedom from extravagance, and is altogether creditable to the impersonater and advantageous to the play.

Little Robbie and Little Edna are two very clever children of tender age, who enacts the role, respectively, of Hans and Etta. They do not appear merely to complete the various stage pictures, but carry their roles throughout the play with singular intelligence and skill, for children so young. Their singing in the broom-making song was very prettily done and evoked two or three enthusiastic encores.

Messrs. Guy Spangler and George Brennan do the best perhaps, that could well be done with the lines and business allotted them as Colon Roughton and Silas Beam. May Templeton does some pleasing work, vocally and otherwise, as Gretchen, and Louise Reming is properly dignified, tender hearted and lovable as Mrs. Vanderberg.

In Other Counties.

There is a rumor that nail works may be established near Lewistown.

George Crise, son of Jury Commissioner Crise, of Mount Pleasant township, Westmoreland county, was kicked in the face by a horse yesterday. He will lose the sight of both eyes.

A prisoner named Marley, an inmate of the Huntingdon reformatory, escaped from the grounds of that institution on Monday. He mounted the fence, jumped down, waded the river and took refuge in a stable in Smithfield where he was recaptured.

An old man named Morris Brunge, who has been keeping a cigar and tobacco store in Yeagertown for the past two or three months, was found dead in his bed Monday morning. He was a bachelor, and has been around Yeagertown for the past ten years. His age was about 75 years.

—A New Yorker, who had been urged to take a trip in an observation car up the Green Mountains of Vermont and was told that he could see so many renowned mountains by so doing, when making the ascent remarked that it was the finest view he had ever seen; that he could even see one of Pennsylvania's famous mountains. When asked where, he replied; pointing to a huge pile of Anthracite coal, "there." All the party at once recognized the truth of the man' assertion.

Personal Pencilings.

Hon. James Milliken is at his home in this place again.

Mr. C. T. Fryeberger, of Philipsburg, was in Bellefonte on Tuesday.

Mrs. Lucy King, of Sunbury, is visiting her parents in this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Brown, of Lock Haven, spent Thursday in this place.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hartswick, of State College, are visting friends in Altoona.

Col. J. L. Spangler has returned from the Congressional conference at Ridgway.

Miss Lizzie Gross, departed for Pittsburg on Wednesday to visit friends in that place.

We are sorry to know that Prof. C. P. Reeves found it to his advantage to resign his position at State College.

Miss Lillie Barnet, of this place, who has been visiting friends in Wilkesbarre, returned home on Monday evening.

Mr. H. E. Fenlon, the good looking clerk of the Bush House, who has been visiting in Ebensburg, returned to this place on Saturday evening.

Major John A. Wolfe, the republican candidate for Sheriff, is now in Bellefonte quartered at the Brockerhoff House. Mr. Wolfe reports everything looking all right.

Mr. Clayton Brown of the Novelty store departed for Philadelphia on Monday, where he will buy in all the latest things in novelties. Don't fail to call around and see his fine stock.

A Steamer for Bellefonte.

The Logan Hose Co., held a special meeting Tuesday night to perfect arrangements to raise money to purchase a steamer. They have the refusal of one for 20 days, it is warranted in first class condition and will do the work done by the Tyrone steamer at our late fire. The Company will send a committee of expert engineers to be present at a test and to examine the engine. At to night's meeting a committee will be appointed to call on all citizens and get just what they will give. This engine will give protection, not only to the people on the hills but to people on the limits of the Borough, all of whom will be called on.

The Logans will start it with $100 which they have in fund for that purpose. They must raise $800 in 20 days and then we will have a first class steamer clear of all debt. If the amount is not raised in set time the money will be refunded.

No Better Show on the Road.

The Hyde Park Gazette of September 15, 1888, says: "Walter L. Main's circus dropped down on Hyde Park last Wednesday, and at night the whole town seemed to turn out to enjoy the festival. It possessed all the features of the old time circus, and the leaping, tumbling and gymnastic performances were never done better in any more ambitious or pretentious shows, and the verdict was universal that it was clean, moral and excellent in all its features. It can come again and be assured of a rousing house. This show is now consolidated with the great Van Amburgh show, but the admission price remains the same."

Death of Jesse Klinger.

The residents of West Bellefonte were shocked this morning to hear that Mr. Jesse Klinger, of West High street, was dead. The gentleman had always enjoyed good health until last Friday when he was taken ill and for a few days has been confined to his bed, but no one anticipated a fatal termination, hence were greatly shocked when it was announced that he died this morning. Deceased was in the neighborhood of 55 years old. Notice of funeral will be given to-morrow.

—Tony Farrell removed all doubt as to the character of the "Broom-Makers" when he the other night endorsed and recommended the company from the stage. He said, "If you don't go and see it you will miss a chance of a life time."

Walter L. Main and Van Amburg's Mastodon Shows Consolidated.

A new and desirable era has been inaugurated by the fortuitous blending of these two great leading shows. What the Van Amburgh show is and what it has been for over half a century is so patent to every body that it is like gilding refined gold and painting the lily to descant on its well-known superiority. Of the Walter L. Main show it is equally needless to speak in words of sounding praise. Nothing then can be more meritorious and attractive than their limitless wealth of consolidated marvels. The vast multiplicity of novel feats, features and arenic episodes that by association they are enabled to present to the public, can not be mentioned within the limited space of any newspaper article, and we can only, therefore, mention a few in the briefest outline. We will call attention to Madame DuBois, the French Hercules, who outpulls the most powerful team of horses that can be produced; Mons. Leonard, the man with the jaws of steal, who lifts a ponderous horse with his teeth alone; Jumbo, the giant horse, Hazel; the Blondin pony, who walks a tight-rope suspended fifteen feet in mid-air, Dan Rice, the walking horse, a den of performing lions; Romeo, the performing elephant; forty first-class performers; ten beautiful lady artistes. Come early and see the grand street parade, bands of music, golden chariots. Also a grand free performance, worth coming one hundred miles to see, it costs you nothing. The price of admission has been placed within the reach of all, making it the cheapest and best show on earth. Remember the day and date, and remember that one 25 cent ticket admits to all the departments of the big show.

This mammoth aggregation of circus, museum and menagerie will exhibit in Bellefonte, on Wednesday, October 8. Don't fail to come and see it.

Transfers of Real Estate.

Joel Minnig to Jeremiah Haines lot of ground in Miles township.

Too Slick for Them.

Regularly every six months the treasury department is said to receive either a $20 or $50 bill which, from all appearances, instead of being made from a plate, is executed entirely with a pen. The work is of a very high order, and several times these bills have defied detection and passed on their tour of circulation unhindered. The counterfeiter seems to be a genius who yearns for notoriety, as he could make his living by his penmanship. The culprit has not yet been captured, although efforts have been made to find him, and I is believed that he has had the pleasure of viewing his hand work in a little frame which hangs on the walls of the treasury building.

Pattison to Visit Bellefonte.

On next Tuesday, October 7th, ex-governor Pattison and the other state candidates, with a list of other influential and prominent democrats, will arrive in Bellefonte and remain until Wednesday. During their stay here they will be quartered at the Bush House. It is likely that there will be a large mass meeting held in the court house on Tuesday evening.

—From the frequency and density of fogs in this vicinity Bellefonte will soon become as notorious as London.
